40 AMERICANS ARE JAILED

HUERTA WILL FIGHT

MEXICO WILL DEFEND RIGHTS, SAYS DICTATOR

National Palace, Mexico, April 27.—To the International News Service, New York City:

The Republic of Mexico has always fulfilled its international obligations, and at every crisis will defend its rights, trampled upon by the government of the United States. (Signed) V. HUERTA.

AMERICANS AT TAMPICO SAVED AS FIGHT RAGES

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Fighting between Federals and Constitutionalists in Tampico was reported at Constitutionalists headquarters here today.

Under the command of General Luis Caballero, 5,000 Constitutionalists soldiers invaded the ciy from the north and west and captured the outlying sections.

The fact that the American consul and his staff left the city, navy officers say, shows that a serious situation has developed.

The American consul is now on board the Dolphin and the consular force went aboard the Des Moines. The North Dakota was reported off Tampico.

Thousands of gallons of oil are spreading over the land around Tampico, and it is feared that it will be ignited, turning the entire district into a sea of fire, which would flow to Tampico, entirely consuming that city.

Admiral Mayo reports that Mexican Federal soldiers demolished the faucets checking and governing the flow of oils from the wells, and two enormous gushers are spouting the inflammable substance.

All Americans have been removed from the Tampico district, according to reports from Admiral Mayo through Admiral Badger. Admiral Badger further reports that the steamer Mexico has left Vera Cruz for New Orleans with 393 refugees and the collier Jason has sailed from Tuxpam for the same place with 260 refugees.

The Paulding and Patterson torpedo boat destroyers, will remain at Tuxpam and take off others who are awaiting transportation. All refugees at Puerto, Mexico, have been removed, bu more are expected from the interior. Sexeral hundred Americans are awaiting transportation at Campeche, Progreso and Frontera.

Arrangements are being made to send a merchant ship to Yucatan to collect refugees there. The steamer Monterey is being held at Vera Cruz as a refugee depot ship and will sail for Nw Orleans when filled. It will transport the thirty-nine refugees on Admiral Mayo's ships. The Spanish merchantman

BERLIN, April 27.—European nations today renewed their efforts to induce General Huerta to yield to the demands of the United States. Announcement was made here that Germany, France and England had instructed their envoys at Mexico City to urge Huerta to make terms for peace.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Dispatches to the State Department from Vera Cruz today announced that Federal General Maas had established headquarters thirty miles from Vera Cruz. American outposts cover the country for nine miles in all directions beyond the city.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The first train today out of Mexico City will carry 250 American refugees to Vera Cruz. Admiral Cradock, the British naval officer at Vera Cruz, having obtained this information by wireless from Mexico City, communicated it to Admiral Badger, who in turn cabled the Navy Department today. The Mexican authorities have agreed to provide transportation and guarantee protection for the train as far as Soledad.

ANCON, Panama Canal, April 27.—The American submarines C 1, C 2, C 3 and C 4 were today sent through the Panama Canal from Gatun Lake, where they were manoeuvering, to Cristobal on the Atlantic side.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—President Wilson today cancelled his engagement for conferences with the Washington correspondents today and Thursday. It is generally understood that the President did not care to answer any questions relative to the policy of the administration.

REGULARS TO MOBILIZE IN QUINCY PARK

A regiment of infantry from Portland, Me., another from Newport, R. I., and several companies of the Coast Artillery from forts in Boston Harbor will mobilize shortyl at Merymount Park and the lot of land owned by the John Quincy Adams estate in Quincy.

Announcement of the selection of this site was made this afternoon following a conference in Quincy City Hall by Paul L. Blackmore, former city solicitor of Quincy, who has been negotiating for the land for the Federal government since the taking of Vera Cruz by Admiral Fletcher.

Present at the conference were Mayor John L. Miller, Colonel Henry Kincaide, retired, M. V. M.; Major Fred E. Jones of the Fifth Regiment, M. V. M.; Captain Matthews, quartermaster, Coast Artillery, U. S. A., representing Colonel Hawthorne in command, and Chairman Ira M. Whittemore of the Park Commission.

Merrymount Park has an acreage of 100 acres. It adjoins the John Quincy Adams estate.

The sanitary arrangements will be attended to at once. The water facilities are excellent.

The Metropolitan Park Commission has offered the use of the Blue Hill Reservation for hiking purposes by the troops, who are to assemble at the Quincy site. The reservation is two miles distant.

In the event of word being received by the regiments to go to the front, arrangements could be made for transportation at a nearby landing, possibly Hough's Neck, where there is a steamboat landing.

NATIONAL PALACE, Mexico City, April 27.—To the International News Service, New York City: The Republic of Mexico has always fulfilled its international obligations, and at every crisis will defend its rights, trampled upon by the government of the United States. (Signed) V. HUERTA.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The foregoing dispatch from President Huerta of Mexico was received at the New York office of the International News Service today. It was in reply to the following dispatch sent to him on Sunday:

CHILE, ARGENTINE AND BRAZIL OFFER MEDIATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO. WILL YOU ACCEPT?

In his answer the Mexican President makes no direct reply to the question cabled to him, but his declaration that Mexico will "defend its rights, trampled upon by the government of the United States," is believed to have only this one meaning:

"HUERTA WILL FIGHT."

The message from President Huerta was first cabled to the London office of the International News Service and thence transmitted to New York.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—"General Huerta has not officially replied to the offer of mediation," declared Secretary of State Bryan today at 11:15 o'clock after a conference with Ambassador Da Gama of Brazil.

It is understood that Da Gama represented also Minister

FLETCHER MOVES TO SAVE 40 AMERICANS TRAPPED BY MOB AND FACING EXECUTION

WHITE HOUSE HAS STRONG PEACE HOPES

Suarez of Chile, and Minister Naon of Argentina, the three having offered to mediate between this government and Huerta. De Gama arrived at the State Department direct from a conference at the Argentine legation.

"I cannot divulge what Mr. Da Gama communicated to me," said Secretary Bryan, "and can say only that the State Department has been advised that General Huerta has not officially replied to the offer of mediation by the three South American republics."

Senator Calderon, Minister from Bolivia, also called on Secretary Bryan and informed him that the Bolivian government had expressed great satisfaction over the steps thus far taken to mediate.

Hopes ran high at the White House and State Department today that the crisis between Dictator Huerta and the United States was passing and that there would be no further hostilities.

This feeling is based on the announcement of Ambassador Riano of Spain that he had heard unofficially from Mexico City that General Huerta had accepted mediation as proposed by the diplomatic representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chili, and encouraging reports from Admiral Fletcher as to the safety of Americans in Mexico.

President Wilson stands first in the ranks of the optimists. His views were voiced by Secretary Tumulty in a brief letter to Colonel John A. Joyce, poet, author and Civil War veteran, who was one of the first to volunteer his services in Mexico. This letter reads:

"The President still hopes that there will be no war."

While a general feeling of relief was evident in administration circles following the announcement of Ambassador Riano, there was a marked tendency among officials to take the report with reservation in the absence of an official acceptance from the Mexican dictator.

Activity Is Undiminished.

There was no diminution of activity at the War and Navy departments.

An element of doubt was strengthened by the prevailing belief in diplomatic circles that Huerta's first demand would be that Brazil and the other mediators as well as the United States accord him recognition on the ground that he cannot well negotiate until he is formally recognized.

It also was regarded as certain that the dictator would insist that there be no recognition of General Carranza or other revolutionary leaders.

Official announcements from the heads of the military and naval departments of the government that the troops and battleships will not be recalled from Mexico until something definite is done "one way or another" means that this country is resting on its arms, but keeping its powder dry.

The concensus of opinion around the War and Navy departments was that war with Mexico is "hanging in the balance."

Thinks Huerta Must Accede.

One eminent naval officer said:

Huerta now has realized that the United States means business. It is inconceivable to think that a man of his type would force himself into war with the greatest power on earth when there is a chance for a loophole. Any stand that he may have taken up to this time has been merely for the edification of his people. Said a high official of the army.

The crisis has been reached. It now depends upon Huerta's action whether we are to have peace or war. In the event that he, as Senor Riano says, will accept mediation, things may be satisfactorily adjusted without further bloodshed through actual warfare. Of course there may be insignificant uprisings now and then which will be quelled in the ordinary course of events. But as a whole the affairs of Mexico will be smoothed over completely by the medium of mediation.

Others close to the administration admitted that there was a peril in the possibility that Huerta might be unable to control his own forces.

A letter of Consul-General Hanna at Monterey, who reported to the Secretary of State the numerous insults offered him by the Federal forces, is viewed as an example of this danger. Men close to Secretary of the Navy Daniels stated today that even should Huerta want to accede to the peace program of President Wilson, his belligerent followers in northern Mexico may thwart these designs.

Those men argue that if Huerta does not quell this pillaging, which is jeopardizing the lives and property of American citizens, we will be thrown into a war even before he gets a chance to consider mediation.

If Huerta does not call off his men who are insulting the American flag and committing other depredations, the American people will rise up and demand of their representatives in Congress that war measures be adopted, and in the face of this tremendous influence President Wilson could not prevent war.

"SNIPING" STOPPED.

A telegram received from Admiral Fletcher at the Navy Department early today says the city of Vera Cruz is quiet and sniping "has been discontinued." His proclamation declaring martial law was expected, the cablegram said, but it has created no excitement.

During Sunday afternoon and night bands from the various ships played in the plaza, and the people passed freely about the streets. Street cars have resumed operations.

Fletcher's message concluded:

I have reason to believe that the message sent to Huerta through the chiefs of staff of Captain Huse and General Corbon has produced the desired effect, and I hope to see refugee trains from Mexico City soon.

BOSTON WOMEN FLOOD RECRUITING OFFICES WITH APPLICATIONS

Boston women are patriotic. More than a score of them have applied for enlistment in the Red Cross or hospital service during the past week at the local recruiting offices.

"I want to say," said Captain Roth, in charge of the army recruiting station on Tremont row, "that the women of Boston are more patriotic than any I have seen. Just previous to the war with Spain I was in charge of the recruiting office in San Francisco, and I can frankly and truly say that I have received more applications either in person or by mail from young women during the past week than I did in two months in the West.

"The army could recruit, I believe, a whole hospital corps of women right here in Boston. It is very pleasing to see the way the women have responded."

HUERTA FORCES WHOLE AUDIENCE INTO ARMY

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The "person calling himself President de facto of the republic of Mexico," as our esteemed Secretary of State would say, has a sense of humor. So much is vouched for by an incident that took place a few days ago in Mexico City, and which has become public gossip here.

Victoriano Huerta has had trouble finding recruits for his army. Accordingly he has devised a hundred schemes to get men for his troops. Not long ago there appeared in every public place in Mexico City huge placards announcing a moving picture show "for men only" in a certain auditorium—the biggest in the city.

The date set was two days ahead, and for those days the city hummed with gossip. All sorts of rumors went the rounds about the mysterious show "for men only." No one could find out who was running the entertainment or what it was to be.

At the appointed hour the auditorium was crowded with young men. After a brief wait, an officer in uniform appeared on the platform and said:

"Gentlemen, I thank you, and President Huerta thanks you for this demonstration of your patriotism. You will find recruiting officers at the doors."

Thereupon a heavy force of troops appeared at the entrance, and every man who had come to the entertainment "for men only" promptly found himself impressed into Huerta's army.

WASHINGTON ORDERS MILITIA TO PREPARE

The War Department is keeping right on with preparations in spite of the peace overtures, as was shown today when Adjutant-General Pearson received a circular from Washington, containing detailed instructions in the event that the Massachusetts militia is called out.

This circular embraced fifteen printed pages which reflected the painstaking care exercised just now at the army headquarters. The most interesting feature of the communication was the order that the various volunteer organizations assemble in their respective armories and there remain until their companies are increased to the war standard.

Adjutant-General Pearson explained today that each company would have to have at least 105 men and might be compelled to supply the full war quota of 150. That is a detail to be determined later, if necessity demands.

RECRUIT IN ARMORIES.

He thought a compromise might be made on the 105 men per company. It had been supposed that the militia, in the event of a call, would be hastily mobilized at some concentration point and there extra recruits drafted, but this will have to be done in the armories before the regiments start for the mobilization point, according to the latest orders from Washington.

Adjutant-General Pearson thought the utmost precaution was made out of consideration for the comfort and health of the militiamen, as this is rough weather in New England to thrust men from civil life under canvas.

He explained that the State would be called upon to equip the various regiments to the requisite militia strength and that war stores and equipment would be supplied by the federal government.

NO OVERCOATS NEEDED.

The adjutant-general replied to the criticism that the Massachusetts militia was shy of overcoats by stating that this would be no hindrance where tropical service was contemplated. He called attention to the circular issued by the War Department two years ago, providing that overcoats be returned to the government when troops are ordered into the tropics. He said overcoats were found useless in the Porto Rico campaign and there was some question whether they would be needed in Mexico.

The War Department has called attention to the deficiency in the supply of shoes and overcoats and it developed today that under recent field service regulations the Bay State militia is in need of thirty-nine wagons. Adjutant-General Pearson said today the State had 115 wagons but the War Department doesn't think that enough.

Adjutant-General Pearson has been informed that a fund of $48,000, supposed to be set apart for the purchase of harness, is not available for the purpose.

CONDOLENCE FROM DANIELS TO MOTHER OF MARINE PERCY

CONCORD, N. H., April 27.—Mrs. Minnie E. Percy, whose son, Rufus E. Percy, U. S. M. C., was killed at Vera Cruz, has received many letters and telegrams of condolence. There was a letter from Governor Felker, another from Senator Gallinger, and the following telegram from Secretary Daniels:

I extend the deepest sympathy to you in the loss of your son, killed in battle at Vera Cruz, Mexico, April 22, 1914. His heroic courage gives his name a place among our country's patriotic defenders. His remains will be returned to the United States as soon as possible.

AMERICAN CONSUL IS JAILED WITH PARTY

FORTY AMERICANS FACING MASSACRE

VERA CRUZ, April 27.—The American authorities are today endeavoring to secure the release of nearly forty Americans, including men, women and children, who were taken from the train at Aguas Calientes and imprisoned in a smelter there, according to news brought to this city by a messenger.

Fears are expressed for the safety of these Americans, as the message stated that the mob which had surrounded the smelter was threatening to execute them.

Among those clapped in jail was Gaston Schmuts, United States Consul at Aguas Calientes. Some of the others are Miss Kay, matron at the Aguas Calente Hotel; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Culver; Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Payton and their two children; Mrs. H. Riehmann and her four children; Mrs. Schmuts, wife of the American Consul; C. L. Baker, general manager of the American Smelting & Refining Company; E. E. Bearn; H. D. Wilde; Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Harroun and their daughter; F. H. McAuley; Mr. Partridge; C. F. Lucas; J. I. Henderson; Mrs. A. B. Emery; Walter Eikel; A. W. Koch; H. Hendricksen of the La Fe Mining Company; Mr. Kenion; Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lee; H. H. Hollingsworth and wife; P. W. Jones and Mr. Sorrell.

The train bearing the Americans was held up by a drunken mob just outside of Encarnacion. They ordered all Americans out of the cars, stating they were to be killed. While the passengers were parleying with the drunken men, there appeared a small party of Mexican soldiers, whose officer protested against the summary execution of the Americans.

He then drove the refugees into the rear car, which was uncoupled from the train and left standing on the track; this coach was taken to Aguas Calientes, where American Consul Schmuts, Railway Superintendent Thomas and a number of railway employes were added to the number of captives, all of whom were locked in the smelter.

Another party of American refugees fleeing from a town in the State of Aguas Calientes were driven from the train and marooned at the station of Trinidad.

K. M. Zandt, president of the American Club, and all the trustees and officers of the club are under arrest in Mexico City, according to news reaching here. Among those detained are M. H. Agramonte, a Civil War general; W. L. Vail, J. B. Buchanan, William A. Parker, C. G. Ray, E. Marr and Charles Yaager, the club's manager, who also is a veteran of the American Civil War.

All of the officials of the Mercantile Banking Company and the Mexico City Banking Company also are now in custody in the capital. They were arrested because they refused to contribute money to the Mexican government. The American Grocery was burned and an attempt made to fire the American Club. Three other American stores were looted.

Handbills urging the populace to burn American business houses are being circulated in the capital.

A number of American women in the capital who otherwise might have come to Vera Cruz on the refugee train refused to leave their husbands. The order against leaving Mexico City appears not to have applied to them.

MOB INSULTS U. S. FLAG AND JAILS AMERICAN CONSUL

WASHINGTON, April 27.—United States Consul-General Philip C. Hanna at Monterey, reported to Secretary Bryan that he had been humiliated and placed in jail by Mexican Federal officials and left behind the bars until released two days later by the Constitutionalists when they captured the city. Consul Hanna's telegram follows:

April 24, 1 p. m.—On the 21st of April a Federal military officer by the name of Captain Arpares del Castillo, evidently instructed by the Federal military commander to tear down all American flags, arrived at this consulate-general with a street mob which he had gathered, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and pounded in the door and demanded that the American flag over this consulate-general be immediately lowered or he would shoot it down, and the other Federals proceeded to tear down all American flags, standing on them, making speeches throughout the city of Monterey, burning some of them and tearing them up and leaving them piled in the middle of the streets.

It was the most insulting act that I or any of the people of Monterey have ever witnessed. They then placed a police guard in front of this consulate general and all the inmates in this building are considered prisoners. The next morning, the 22d of April, about 10 o'clock, a police lieutenant arrived with a force of men and advised me that he had been instructed to search the building. The insulting search was completed about noon, when your consul-general was taken prisoner through the streets with the mob and carried first to the penitentiary and afterwards to the State government palace, which building has been for some time military headquarters and fortified, and was the object of special attack by the then attacking forces.

While I was placed under heavy guard in the grand reception room of the State Palace, I fully realized that I was constantly being considerably insulted and greatly humiliated, not on account of my personality, but on account of my official position as representative of the United States government in northern Mexico.

BAY STATE MILITIA READY FOR MARCHING ORDERS, DECLARE OFFICERS

BAY STATE MEN ASK TO SEE REAL SERVICE

Massachusetts military men are ready for whatever turn events may take.

Col. E. L. Logan

Colonel Edward L. Logan, commanding the Ninth Infantry, said:

"The Ninth is ready for action. There is no doubt about the spirit of the men. They are ready and willing to do anything their country requires. It is true that we haven't a satisfactory shoe or overcoat in the lot. But that matter would be taken care of by the government, in case of an emergency call to arms.

Last year we were furnished with enough overcoats for the non-commissioned officers, but they were old things that hadn't been accepted by any inspector for the past thirty years. They were a source of jealousy among the men, and really should never have been given to a few men without giving them to all. However, we wouldn't let a little thing like that interfere with our responding to a call for service. We could mobilize on board a transport in Boston Harbor in twelve hours."

Col. Frank F. Cutting

Colonel Frank F. Cutting of Wakefield, commanding the Fifth Massachusetts Infantry, said:

"You can put us down as 'Johnny on the spot,' so far as readiness is concerned. In case of a sudden summons the Fifth Regiment would be mobilized at their armory in about an hour. We are all right so far as equipment is concerned, but the overcoats, while perfectly good to withstand weather, are sadly dilapidated and out of date.

"The men are good soldiers and are ready to hike at a moment's notice. Lakeville is, I consider, an ideal spot for mobilization, and the reserve army which we represent will profit by the drill and experience of camp life. There is no means of knowing which regiment will be called out first in case of a general declaration of war. I should anticipate that honor, however, by reason of my being the senior colonel in the state."

Col. Cyrus H. Cook

Colonel Cyrus H. Cook of Concord, commanding the Sixth Regiment, M. V. M., said:

"The Sixth is ready and is awaiting the word to proceed to the mobilization camp at Lakeville. There is no doubt that there is a decided lack of modern clothing among at least 50 per cent. of the militia. Our men are wearing the old blue overcoats which have been on the market for at least thirty years. This applies to the privates. The non-commissioned officers have the olive drab overcoats which were furnished last year.

"Shoes of the proper pattern, too, are lacking, but we are not worrying any. In case of a sudden call the Sixth Infantry could be on the march in less than twenty-four hours. While none of the companies can boast of full war strength at present, I know that we would have no trouble in recruiting enough men, should the occasion demand it."

Gen. E. Leroy Sweetser

Brigadier General E. LeRoy Sweetser, commanding the Second Brigade, said:

"The Second Brigade is in readiness and if called would assemble in Boston and then proceed to the mobilization camp. We could have all the companies assembled within a period of eight or ten hours. We have everything necessary to leave. Among the coats we have some of the olive drab overcoats and some of the blue, but if called to a mobilization camp we would be able to get the olive drab coats."

Major John H. Sherburne of Brookline, commanding the First Battalion, Field Artillery, said:

"Our battalion is fully equipped and ready for anything. We could be on board transports—baggage, horses, guns and everything—inside of thirty-six hours at the very latest. Our battalion has recently been recruited to full war strength and we are simply awaiting orders."

Colonel William C. Hayes of Springfield, commanding the Second Massachusetts Infantry, said:

"We are all in readiness for immediate activity. The call to march is the only thing left now. We could mobilize for service in a very few hours, as shown by the recent trial in which the members of the Second Regiment responded to a special signal in less than five hours. The men are anxious to see some real service. An insufficient supply of heavy overcoats is the only element lacking in our equipment."

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles F. Ropes of Salem, commanding the Second Corps Cadets, said:

"It wouldn't take more than three hours for the entire corps to mobilize. We are ready and waiting. While our enrollment is not up to full war strength, we could easily recruit our full quota in a day or two if the necessity arose. I am in receipt of letters from old members of the corps offering their services, and I am informed that such is the case all over the State.

WALSH WILL GIVE HEARING ON CAMP SITE

Unless Mayor N. J. W. Fish and the people of Taunton can present some stronger reason than any as yet put forth the Massachusetts militia will mobilize on the campground at Lakeville.

This was the substance of a statement made by Governor Walsh today upon his return from his inspection of the site selected on the recommendation of Colonel Frank F. Cutting of the Fifth Infantry, Major John W. Heavey of the United States Army, Surgeon-General Frank P. Williams and Major Christopher P. Harrison of the Engineer Corps.

The Governor is completely satisfied with the selection, but has agreed to give Mayor Fish of Taunton a public hearing on the matter some day this week. Mayor Fish objected to the mobilization of troops on the ground that the water at Assawompsett Pond, from which Taunton draws its supply, would be contaminated. This objection was overruled by the State Board of Health.

GOVERNOR SEES GROUND.

The Governor, at the request of Mayor Fish, visited the campground himself. He was accompanied by Captain Frank M. Gunby of the Coast Artillery Corps and an officer of the regular army. They visited every part of the field and paid close attention to the points upon which the objections to the site was based.

The inspection lasted several hours, and upon leaving the field the Governor said he could see no good reason why the troops should not be mobilized there. Taunton's contention is upset by the finding of the State Board of Health, but the Governor is willing to listen to any new argument the people of that city may advance and for that reason he plans to hold a public hearing on the matter this week.

Governor Walsh hopes the troops will not have to be called out. He abhors the idea of having to send any of the young men of Massachusetts into Mexico, but if the call does come he means to be prepared. That is why he has paid so much attention to the selection of a mobilization field that will meet the requirements.

The camp at Lakeville is up to the standard. It is situated in the eastern part of the State, from which most of the troops will be drawn. It is sanitary and the railroad facilities are excellent. These were the main points which guided the Governor in his selection.

This is the same field upon which General Joseph Hooker mustered in his famius regiment at the time of the Civil War. Its god has been seen with the seed of battle for the past 150 years, and the 1,200-acre expanse was the scene of the most famous of all the clashes of King Philip and the Indians. The property is owned by Nathaniel G. Staples.

PLEASED BY VISIT.

On his way back to Boston Governor Walsh dropped in at the Lakeville Sanatorium and was greeted by Superintendent Coolidge. He arrived unannounced and spent an hour and a half in the men's department, during which time he shook the hand of each of the 175 patients. He was given a cheer as he passed the various cots with a smile or a pleasant word of encouragement for each of the inmates.

The Governor was pleased with his visit, and on his return to Boston anxiously inquired whether there had been any word from Washington.

When I finally did see Huerta, we discussed the Tampico incident most amicably. His expressions indicated a considerable displeasure that the arrest of the Dolphin's crew should have been permitted. He gave me the impression that he was much incensed at the stupidity of the officer who was responsible for it and who had added to Huerta's troubles by his blundering step.

It is interesting to note that in spite of his frequent public explosions against our policy toward him and his outward attitude of defiance and indifference to anything we might do Huerta was always very careful to allow nothing to be done that would bring about an open break between Washington and his government.

That night Huerta sent for me and we talked for a long time. I went away with a distinct impression that he had receded from his position regarding recognition and that he would come to a satisfactory understanding with my government, and I so communicated to Washington.

Later I ascertained that I had apparently misunderstood what Huerta had said. This threw negotiations back to the original status, so we got nowhere.

I firmly believe that Huerta was skeptical that Washington would press matters to the point of armed occupation of either Tampico or Vera Cruz. I think he had probably the mental reservation that if things grew too cloudy he would draw back at the last moment.

Palpably he had not the slightest appreciation of the complications which had prevented Washington from taking decisive steps in Mexico before this point had been reached.

It was not until the middle of April that I began to realize that Huerta was playing for time. He was marking time, hoping that something would turn up in his favor. He was playing a game of watchful waiting.

Huerta's chief hope was that the United States would become involved in a war with Germany, and he was counting on that to relieve the pressure which was being brought to bear upon him.

Huerta's chief asset was the apathy of the United States. He knew that the people of the United States were not in favor of war with Mexico, and he was relying upon that sentiment to prevent it.

He was also relying upon the fact that the United States would not recognize the calm surface of affairs the dangers which another beneath. There was much activity at the National Palace and the War Office.

A few students from the Chapultepec Military Academy and the National Medical Academy marched through the streets singing the national anthem, but most of the populace spent the day attending religious services, walking on the promenades or listening to the band concerts.

General Huerta, true to his promise, kept the streets well policed with rurales and cavalry men, but was inspired by a desire to put down any anti-government disorder, as well as to afford protection to citizens of other nations.

Some of the stores which were closed because of the riots last week gave notice that they would open their doors on Monday morning if the city remained quiet.

Pastor Roblin Ready to Follow Flag; Calls for Men

If the flag goes South to war, I go with it, and as the chaplain of the Fifth Regiment I know the hard ordeal before me. The sick, the wounded, and the dying are the ones calling for the services of the man who is the spiritual guide of their regiment.

I know these men intimately. They are as dear to my heart as sons, and God grant that they may not be called. But if we are called we all respond, as every man and every soldier in this wide land should, to the call of war.

Peace advocates are apt to embarrass their own governments at such times. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan will do all that any men could possibly to do prevent war and the haggling of peace rhetoricians will not aid them in the least.

The call to war is, as of yore, for patriots—men ready to sacrifice themselves to support the flag and that for which it stands. It is not for shirkers, not for men who are afraid of perils and hardships; but for men of blood and will, men inspired with the spirit of sacrifice.—The Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Roblin, pastor of the Second Universalist Church.

O'SHAUGHNESSY TELLS OF HUERTA PARLEYS

VERA CRUZ, April 27.—Charge d'Affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy today for the first time told of his last few days in the Mexican capital and his dealings with Huerta. His story follows:

It became apparent early in the developments arising from the Tampico flag incident that that situation was fraught with ominous possibilities, although it was my opinion almost to the last minute that Huerta would recede from a position which made it impossible for Washington to adjust matters.

You must understand that had Huerta waived his instance upon a return salute to the Mexican flag by the United States—which act would have implied a recognition by our government—the Tampico incident would have been unsensationally closed.

REBELS FORCING HUERTA.

The situation was rapidly getting worse in the country, and Huerta was growing less able to resist successfully the rebels, to say nothing of making headway against them.

When I received the first information of the arrest of the Dolphin's sailors and of Admiral Mayo's demand, which came to me first through the Mexican Foreign Office, it was too late for me to do anything.

That was Friday, April 10, and according to the time limit fixed by Admiral Mayo, satisfaction had to be given by 6 o'clock that night.

Everyone who has had experience dealing with Mexican officials knows how difficult it is to stir them to quick action, under the most favorable conditions. The most I was worse than usual. For we were in the midst of Holy Week holidays, when no one concerned with the government worked.

When I finally did see Huerta,

QUIET IS RESTORED IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

MEXICO CITY, April 26, Via London, April 27.—Anti-foreign feeling almost wholly died out today, and a number of Americans who had booked passage on a train for Vera Cruz tonight cancelled their booking.

There were sporadic outbursts, but nothing of a serious character. However, those who know Mexican character declare that the lull today does not mean that anti-foreign feeling particularly directed against Americans has disappeared completely.

For the most part Sunday was quietly spent and a stranger in the city would not have recognized on the

DISPATCH BOAT FOR AMERICAN GETS NAVY MAIL

By JACK BINNS.

By wireless from the AMERICAN'S dispatch boat Senator Bailey, in the Gulf of Mexico, en route for Vera Cruz, via Brownsville, Tex., April 26.

After acting as a pivot in the centre of a scene of wireless activity for twenty-four hours, the AMERICAN'S dispatch boat Bailey yesterday made possible a transfer at midnight through her wireless.

This transfer, made in a rough sea, was for the purpose of getting dispatches and mail from the battleship Louisiana. Among the dispatches was one to the AMERICAN containing the first uncensored account of the capture of Vera Cruz.

The battleship Louisiana relieved the three torpedo boats as convoy to the transports.

Arrangements were then made between the captains of the Louisiana and the Bailey to close in and then to stand by for the battleship's whaleboat. Under the powerful rays of the Louisiana's searchlight and the warning flashes of the Bailey's wireless, the whaleboat successfully completed the trip across heavy, breaking seas.

Then followed a race against time to rush the account to the nearest telegraph offices, with wireless making advance arrangements.

After the departure of the troopships and their torpedoboat convoy from Galveston the Bailey became the chief relaying station.

Her wireless set was placed at the service of General Funston on the transport Kilpatrick. Advantage of the same courtesy was taken by the transport Sumner.

The cable between Galveston and Tampico being discontinued, the Bailey was early used by the station at Galveston to relay messages to Tampico through the yacht Wakiva, lying alongside the quay at that city.

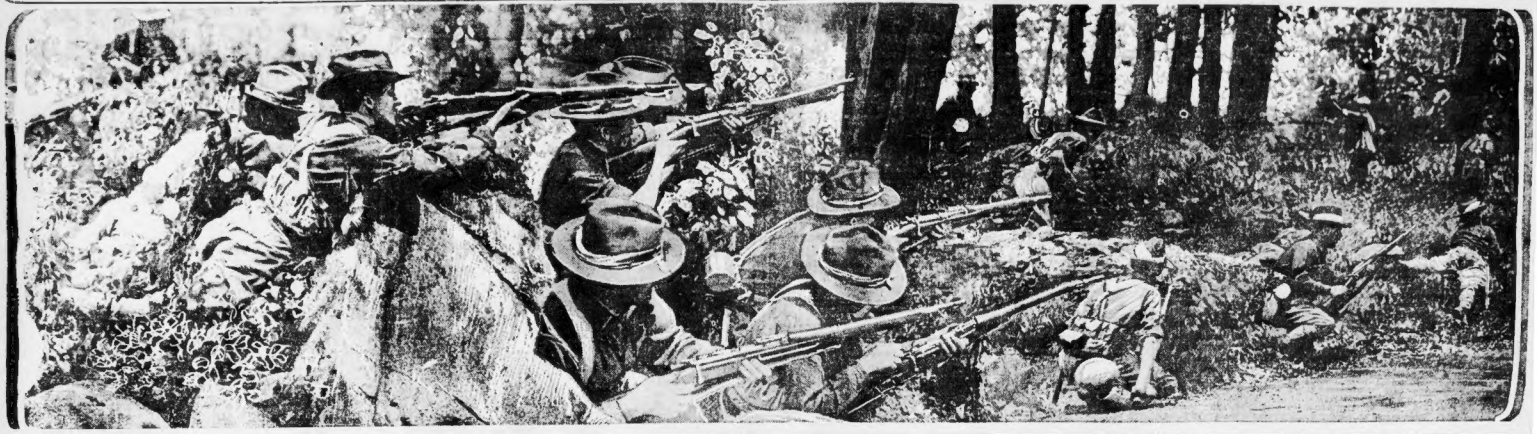
REFUGEES AT GALVESTON TELL OF TORTURE, DEATH AND SUFFERING IN FLIGHT FROM MEXICO

NEW YORK NATIONAL GUARDSMEN DRILL IN PARKS IN PREPARATION FOR CALL TO MEXICO.



AMERICANS GLAD TO ESCAPE WITH LIVES

GALVESTON, April 27.—Tales of death, torture and terrible outrages committed by Mexicans were told today by refugees who have arrived here from all points of Mexico.

Every steamer stopping here from Mexican ports brings a host of sufferers, and 4,000 are expected to arrive before the end of the week. Those who fled from the vicinity of Tampico suffered the worst.

Several refugees on the steamer Esperanza told of seeing three Americans hanged by Mexicans, forty miles from Tampico. They were accused of theft and were given trials. Other instances were related where property was confiscated and foreigners ordered to leave.

Most of the refugees came from Mexico City, Vera Cruz and Tampico. Those who came from the last named city were bitter in their criticism of the action of the United States warships at that point.

While Americans were being threatened and insulted by mobs, and their property looted and destroyed, the United States warships, carrying enough guns to blow Tampico to atoms, within several miles to sea. Marines were landed from the German cruiser Dresden and the Americans were protected and later carried out to the refugee ships by the German sailors.

BURN CHILD'S LEGS.

Mrs. M. G. Martin, whose husband had a small store at Panuco settlement, tells a horrible story of the cruelty of Mexican treatment of herself and children. Her husband had started to Tampico for more supplies several days before she left and nothing was heard of him, so she supposed he was killed.

Mexicans forced their way into her place the day after Vera Cruz was taken by the United States. Taking all the goods, money, arms and valuables they could find, they demanded more. Finally they tortured her to reveal the hiding place of 1,200 pesos, all that she and her husband had saved. They placed her five-year-old daughter sable so near the fire that she was scorched all about the feet and legs, forcing the mother to witness their acts, and thus forced her to reveal the hiding place of the money. Mrs. Martin goes to Muskogee, Okla., to live with relatives.

Ed Kline of Marian, Kan., said:

"When the news of the landing of marines came, the Americans gathered at Southern Hotel and prepared to protect themselves. Posters were distributed about the streets and from every quarter came the cry of death to the gringos.

"Federals and rebels united and several shots were fired into the hotel. We were saved by the commander of the German cruiser Dresden, who saw the riot and quelled it by training guns on the Mexicans and telling them to cease or he would fire.

"We were then taken aboard ship, and just in time to see several hundred Mexicans gallop up and fire into a house formerly occupied by Americans. As we left the port the Mexicans fired on the ship. Several bullets struck it and Mr. Miller of Ohio was shot through the leg."

R. L. Britton, who was robbed at Panuco, told of the fighting there. "The rebels rushed into the city at daybreak of April 13, and in one hour had captured it. They took the Federal soldiers to the hills. All Huerta's sympathizers were hanged to trees, their bodies frightfully mutilated and left for the crows. No Americans were killed, but all were robbed and their homes burned.

"Boyd Dickinson was tied to a tree and whipped until he revealed the hiding place of his money. A Mrs. Benner was lashed to the bed and her three children locked in the cellar until the house was searched. They were later released by neighbors. Ed. Birney was beaten senseless and robbed. Women were choked until they gave up their jewelry. It was dangerous to life, and we travelled to Tampico, which is eighty miles distant."

Howard J. Wells, owner of a large plantation halfway between Panuco settlement and Tampico, went through a series of thrilling experiences.

"Our place was repeatedly robbed of stock and cattle by prowling bands of Mexicans," he said. "They raided my place two nights before Vera Cruz was taken by our men. They took all the valuables and small articles, all the food and clothing they could find and then destroyed the furniture and other stuff they could not carry away.

HELPER IS SLAIN.

"Once when I protested I was struck with the butt of a rifle. No one was on the place at the time but the Mexican helper. He was prodded with bayonets, beaten, and at last shot through the body several times, dying. They threatened to kill me unless I showed them where they could get money, arms and liquor. I showed them everything in the house, but there was not enough money to satisfy them, so I was commanded to get more by the next night or pay the penalty with my life.

"As soon as they left, I caught one of my horses which had gotten away from them, and that night was hidden under the house and started for Tampico.

"I had gotten only a few miles from my ranch when I was seen by a part of this band, who, of them giving chase. When one neared me I fired, but only hit his horse, throwing him. In the darkness I finally evaded them, but realizing that to stop then would mean death, I had to ride all night to reach Tampico. When I got there, tired from the hard trip and sore from the lick I had received, I found no safety, as anti-American demonstrations were already on. I have lost everything in Mexico, but I am glad to escape with my life."

A caustic telegram was drafted by a mass meeting on board the Trinidad in which the 372 refugees sent "thanks" to Governor Colquitt and President Wilson for being allowed to remain on steamer decks, drenched, cold and sick.

Practically every one of the party has declared his intention of returning to Mexico as soon as conditions there become settled again. Every one has a large property interest, most of them have been robbed and endured hardships, some have lost relatives, yet they all want to get back to the country if it seems settled again.

AMERICAN REFUGEES ARRIVE AT EL PASO

EL PASO, April 27.—Ninety-seven refugees, mostly Americans, arrived here early today from the interior of Northern Mexico. Forty-six came from Parral and Santa Barbara and fifty-one from Torreon, Santa Rosalie, Chihuahua and other points. The fact that foreigners, other than American, were in the party showed the feeling of anxiety that is spreading through the Southern republic.

Among the refugees from Parral was Louis M. Scott, son of General Hugh L. Scott, assistant chief of staff of the United States army. Mr. Scott has been employed as a mining engineer in the Parral district.

All of these refugees declared that the Constitutionalist officers had forbidden any demonstrations against Americans and were preserving order by the issuance of proclamations that the lives and property of Americans will be dealt with severely.

The rebel leaders tried to induce Americans not to leave Parral and even went to the Mexico Central station there to tell the refugees that the Americans would be protected if withdrawn from Vera Cruz and that the entire difficulty had been "settled to the satisfaction of all parties in the United States and Mexico."

The departure of Americans from Chihuahua, Sonora and Coahuila has resulted in raising a serious problem for the Constitutionalists. Thousands of Mexicans have been thrown out of work and the rebel government will be compelled to furnish food to them.

U. S. CANNOT STOP NOW DECLARES F. R. COUDERT

Frederick R. Coudert, the lawyer, declared that no matter what resulted from the proposed mediation in Mexico, the United States could not immediately withdraw from Mexican soil.

"In the interests of humanity and in keeping with the best laws of man it is but fair that we listen carefully to any proposition that will end war.

"Everything depends upon how the de facto government of Mexico would act. They might make any number of promises and pledges, only to break them when the watchful eye of this government was turned away. It would be necessary that we exact from the leaders of the several Mexican factions substantial and tangible evidence of good faith.

"We should hold Tampico and Vera Cruz and it would be necessary for us to maintain an army of occupation to see that a constitutional government founded on responsible lines was administered properly. But we cannot withdraw, no matter what happens. We have gone too far. Our dignity demands that we now follow to the end. I do not feel too sanguine about the success of the mediators."

GENERAL OPINION IS AGAINST PEACE PLAN

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Only one official in twenty believes that the proposed mediation plan will amount to something. The remaining nineteen are divided evenly between those who vigorously denounce the idea of mediation, and those who think it will fail because it is based on impossible contingencies.

Preparations for war continue. Acceptance of the mediation proposals mean nothing. It commits the United States to nothing but further waiting, and this will give opportunity to all Americans and other foreigners in Mexico to get clear of the country.

The belief that this is the Administration's real view is strengthened by the fact that hundreds of Americans refused to leave Mexico when warned to do so.

About the length of time that will be consumed in getting Huerta's final and definite refusal to mediate will enable most Americans to get out of danger.

This same reason is given for the the president's hesitancy to order concentration of the militia forces.

GENERAL FUNSTON IN COMMAND.

Secretary Garrison and Secretary Daniels developed a mild conflict as to whether General Funston, in command of the troops, or Admiral Badger, in command of the fleet, shall take command of the joint campaign. It was finally settled that General Funston will have command on land.

Reports have been received at the Navy Department that the cruiser New Orleans and the gunboat Yorktown have entered Guaymas harbor, on the west coast.

One battalion of the Fourth Field Artillery left Galveston for Vera Cruz aboard the transport Saltillo. The Sixth, Twelfth and Sixteenth regiments of infantry, from the Presidio, San Francisco, have arrived at San Antonio, to be distributed at Nogales, El Paso and Laredo.

Hope for peace—yet no slackening in preparations for war—was the spirit of today's developments in the Mexican crisis.

President Wilson, hopeful, though not confident, that war may be averted through the efforts of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, conferred with Secretary Garrison, approving orders for the joint jurisdiction of the Army and Navy over Vera Cruz and vicinity when Brigadier-General Funston, who will be in command there, arrives this afternoon to re-enforce Admiral Fletcher's forces of marines and bluejackets.

NOW AWAITING EXODUS.

Tension over the one phase of the situation, which may at any moment upset peace plans—the safety of Americans in Mexico City and other interior points—was partially relieved by the announcement of Secretary Bryan that through the British Embassy here, the Huerta officials and Admiral Fletcher had arranged for the safe departure of Americans from the Mexican capital and the free exodus of Mexicans from Vera Cruz.

Thomas B. Hohler, first secretary of the British Legation in Mexico, arrived with a train load of Mexicans from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, informed General Huerta that the American forces were free to go without restraining Mexicans from leaving there and was assured that Americans consequently would be allowed to leave as they pleased.

"We are communicating directly with Mexico City and have sent and received three messages," said Counsellor Agasio of the Chilean legation.

The question was asked if the mediators were bearing anything from Huerta. Counsellor Agasio replied that "it would be manifestly improper for me to say anything more."

EUROPE SNEERS AT WILSON AND PEACE

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, April 27.—In connection with the latest developments of the Mexican situation the London Daily Sketch, under the warning caption, "Mediation by Dago Nations," says this:

Bathos rules in Mexico, where there are four or five presidents already. The state of mind of President Wilson resembles that of the curate in "The Private Secretary," who threatened: "If you are not careful I shall give you a good hard knock."

Having assembled a dreadnaught fleet in two oceans and mobilized an army on two frontiers, President Wilson proceeds to accept the mediation of Brazil, Chile and Argentina. One at least of these States is rather less settled and civilized in normal conditions than Mexico itself.

But note the President's language. The "good hard knock" is only deferred. If Mexico commits acts of aggression she will be liable to get hurt; to some extent; she may feel quite bruised

BACKDOWN, SAYS PARIS.

PARIS, April 26.—The press fears what it regards as the President's backdown, as implied by the Latin-American offer of mediation.

The semi-official Paris Temps suggests that the action of Brazil, Chile and Argentina was so timely as to seem to have been almost invited by Washington.

The Journal des Debats says:

The White House was in a bad way, and now rushes to accept the South American offer after having rejected it at the outset of the conflict. President Wilson undoubtedly fears being dragged into a long and costly war in which international incidents might arise.

The Debats is also amazed at "the want of tact" of Mrs. Pankhurst in attending the wedding of Huerta's son, accepting the obviously false report in a London newspaper, and adds:

If other Americans in Mexico have shown an equal want of tact, one cannot be surprised that they have been molested.

The transatlantic does not think the proposed mediation can have any useful result. It says:

Wilson and Bryan continue to look for a miracle. In vain does the War Secretary ask for orders; in vain does Roosevelt, eager to fight, announce he is going to organize a cavalry brigade; in vain does Carranza cable to the Madrid press that all Mexicans will fight against the invader to the last man—Wilson and Bryan, as sincere pacifists, stop their ears and hope.

WARNING ISSUE.

The Gaulois utters a warning that although the European Powers are now simply awaiting events, the United States must not rely absolutely on the continuance of that passive attitude. It adds:

Europe will not be indifferent to the Huerta-Wilson duel when her interests are seriously affected.

John Drake, an associate of the late John W. Drake & Son and formerly Governor of Iowa, said to the AMERICAN correspondent today:

It is the manifest duty and destiny of our nation to take possession of the whole of Mexico and ultimately of Central America, and establish order and civilized methods of living there.

American interests in Mexico and the provocation given us during the last year fully justify a war of conquest, because conquest in this instance will be more humane than any temporizing policy.

With suitable energy on our part, I do not think a war should be of great duration. Every State Governor will of course respond promptly to a call from the President and send militia regiments to Mexico. When it comes to raising a volunteer army, the federal government will have more offers of enlistment than it can accept.

NAVY YARD OFFICERS ARE ORDERED TO SEA

A radiogram was received at the Charlestown yard today as a result of which between fifty and seventy-five petty officers attached to receiving ships, bands and hospitals there and at Portsmouth will be at once shifted to sea duty. The compliments of the hospitals and receiving ships will be reduced to a minimum.

Retired naval officers, it is reported, are to be put in charge at the yard, and the men now there will be sent to the front. There aren ow thirty-seven marines at the yard with a colonel and a lieutenant.

The gunboat Castine is today being painted and provisioned and will be ready to sail by Wednesday. It was today announced. The Rhode Island, in dry dock, is being scraped and painted, while down in her engine-room a big force is at work.

The Massachusetts Nautical Training Ship Ranger will not make her annual Spring inspection cruise with Governor Walsh aboard, starting next Wednesday, because of hold order from Washington. The cruise may come later. It is being planned to use the Ranger in government service if necessary.

DANDRUFF SURELY DESTROYS THE HAIR

Makes It Dull, Brittle, Lifeless, and Causes It to Fall Out.

Girls—If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every singe sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will be silky, fluffy, lustrous, soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails. —ADVERTISEMENT.

CRISIS CALLS FOR A "MAN," SAYS LEWIS

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—From Watchful Waiting we have sunk to Watchful Wabbling. The call of the hour is for a MAN. Also, so far as the administration is concerned, the MAN to not to be forthcoming and the call will be in vain.

Senators and Representatives are shellbound at the notion that Argentina, Brazil and Chili have been commissioned to "mediate." For the most part they refuse to talk, or, talking, talk but little. It's as though they were planet-struck.

One fact, yet a proud one, has been uncovered. The three little South Americans is not tender their services as "mediators." They were asked, almost begged, by Mr. Bryan to come forward to that capacity.

What a situation! And the longer one looks at it the more humiliating it seems. Argentina, Brazil and Chili "mediate" between Mexico and the United States! It's as though a trio of rabbits had been commissioned to "mediate" between a wild hog and a cinnamon bear.

BRYAN-WILSON PLAN.

That, however, is according to the Bryan-Wilson diplomacy, which—as I have said before—is prairie-dog diplomacy and based upon the great principle of never being two feet from your hole.

At a dinner Saturday evening Mr. Root, expanding upon the "horrors of war," was fain to burst into tears. Mr. Root's distress would have been more affecting, if not effective, had not every banqueter known that Mr. Carnegie can retain Mr. Root to weep just as he retains him to try a law suit or preach the peaceful beauties of a closed pro-English canal.

It was quite dramatic, none the less, when Mr. Bryan, as Mr. Root sat mopping his sensitive and easily refreshed eyes, arose and with his best composite, Pecksniff-and-Uriah Heep expression, unloaded that precious proffer of "mediation."

It was a memorable occasion, truly. Americans were being mediated in the City of Mexico at the very moment that Mr. Bryan, for Mr. Wilson, stood telling how "delighted" he was to inform mankind and in particular the moist, damp, tearful, retained Mr. Root, that the "mediation" efforts of Argentina, Brazil and Chili had been invited, and that the plump peoples would do their best to make our peace with Mexico and brazil-soaked Huerta.

CARNEGIE FIRST INFORMED.

And by the way, whom did Mr. Wilson first notify of his proposed program of milk-and-water "mediation?" Whom but Mr. Carnegie.

That more or less numerous old gentleman was witnessing a show at Carnegie Hall.

Upon receiving Mr. Wilson's polite wire, however, he climbed blithely out of his box upon the stage, with what the reporters call the "agility of youth," and taking instant possession to the consternation of certain chorus girls, then and there in lawful occupation of the same, read the Wilson wire and made a speech.

He referred to himself as the great peace promoter of the world, declared that we were wrong and Mexico right, insisted that Mr. Wilson as a statesman was nothing short of a fire-fed genius, and wound up by saying that the chorus girls—who had about enough on to flag a hand car—reminded him vastly of angels of mercy.

Is Mr. Wilson an American President or a Carnegie president? Every one has known for moons that Mr. Root was a Carnegie and not an American Senator. And now this unctuous and effusive White House wire to Mr. Carnegie raises this Wilson doubt.

ROOT'S DEFENCE OF CARNEGIE.

When Senator Poindexter went after our Carnegie-Senator, Mr. Root, the other day, the latter registered a vehement protest. He declared that the right of Mr. Carnegie, with his Peace Foundation carrying such tall names as those of former President Eliot of Harvard, President Butler of Columbia, ex-Mayor Seth Low and ex-Cabinetter Oscar Straus, to say nothing of his own highly retained if not highly respected cognomen, to come to Washington and pull on lobby ropes in favor of a pro-English closed canal was not to be impeached.

Mr. Carnegie was a philanthropist. Mr. Carnegie was among the purest spirits of the age. To say that Mr. Carnegie—a saint on earth—could have motives other than motives of brotherly love and to preserve a world's peace was the very essence of vilification.

Not alone on the Senate floor does Mr. Root defend his client, Mr. Carnegie, but in private confabs he is quite as loyal and incessant. In the Senate cloakroom a Senator (not otherwise engaged casually mentioned Mr. Carnegie as a devourer of rebates.

Mr. Root became warm in his protests against such a line of talk. That charge of rebates was a mistake.

The open canal anti-Carnegie Senator could see, he declared, many reasons, not PEACE reasons, why Mr. Carnegie should be concerned for a closed, pro-England canal.

"That Mr. Carnegie," concluded the cloak room senatorial critic as the wrathful Mr. Root was about to withdraw, "should cry 'PEACE,' when he means DOLLARS, or give honor, rather than railroads, as his argument for a closed pro-English canal, is not astonishing."

"Double-dealers and sinning folk, who commit their offences on the sunshine side of the law, have ever stolen the livery of heaven to serve the devil in. Why not? It's the best defence in the world."

GUNBOATS IN WAIT FOR U. S. TRANSPORTS

By CHARLES MICHELSON.

On Board the AMERICAN Dispatch Boat Senator Bailey, by Wireless via Brownsville, Texas, April 27.—Whatever view may be entertained elsewhere, on board the transports proceeding to Vera Cruz and on the convoy, there is no opinion but that General Funston will immediately, on landing, proceed to march on Mexico City.

But Bailey was among the transports several hours. The officers will not admit the receipt of any orders calling for definite action, but believe they are going to delay just long enough to allow the cavalry and artillery, which were supposed to start from Galveston today, to catch up before beginning definite operations.

HUNT MEXICAN GUNBOATS.

The Bailey was among the transports borne out by another piece of military evidence. The torpedo boats Plunkett, Preston and Reid, which started out to convey the four transports, gave place to the battleship Louisiana, which came from Vera Cruz to relieve them, and the three torpedo boats sailed away to the west, where, according to the gossip of the fleet, they are now gunboat hunting.

The Mexican Federal gunboats Zaragosa, Vera Cruz and Bravo are supposed to be somewhere along the northeast Mexican coast, with instructions to cut out the transports.

The torpedo boats, by reason of their light draft, can penetrate the shallow bays and rivers in which the Mexican gunboats are probably hiding. Nobody on board the transports takes the orders to the Mexican navy to capture and sink them very seriously.

The pursuit by the torpedo boats, however, marks a departure from the pacification methods which have prevailed ever since the landing of the marines at Vera Cruz.

SHOO MEXICAN SHIP OFF.

A Mexican gunboat which actually took part in that action, firing on the marines from the bay, was merely warned with some firmness to cease firing and was allowed to go on her way, although she was under the guns of the whole United States fleet in those waters.

The Mexican transport gunboat Yucatan appeared at Vera Cruz with a Mexican regiment on board coming to reinforce General Maas. She now told that General Maas was no longer there to be reinforced and was shooed on her way without a hostile word, let alone a hostile shot.

The change from these methods to the gunboat-hunting of which we got word today is vastly significant.

The Louisiana, which now constitutes the convoy to the transports, is putting them through a course of maneuvers probably intended more for drill than for immediate protection.

The transports formed in line with the battleship in the centre. Probably a quarter of a mile separated each ship. The line was rigid for an hour. Then the big white transports started a march reminding one of Mr. Ziegfeld's best choruses.

When they got down to a definite position the four transports occupied the corners of a square a mile each way with the battleship in the exact centre. We had hardly finished admiring the five of diamonds arrangement when the Louisiana dropped back to the line of the Meade and the McLellan. There she remained for some hours, like a shepherder with a shepherd dog on either hand, driving the two sheep ahead.

REPUBLICS FATHERED BY U. S., SAYS CLARK

NEW YORK, April 27.—Speaker Clark yesterday afternoon addressed the largest Sunday gathering ever held at the West Side Y. M. C. A. He was introduced by Mr. Kingsley as "The leader of our national life." To his audience he said:

"We are a peaceful but belligerent people. If President Wilson were to send me a telegram this afternoon announcing that all the nations of the world had united against us, I know that before nightfall, in this very Congressional district, I could muster up an entire brigade."

He then quoted from a speech delivered by Abraham Lincoln in the early fifties, in which the former President said:

"If all the nations of the earth were at war upon the United States they would not be able to water their horses in any of our rivers.

"No man wants war, but there is not a man in this country who would not step forward to defend his country."

Speaker Clark then enumerated the twenty-six republics which have sprung up all over the world since a republic was established in the United States.

U. S. WAR AIRSHIP PROVES BIG SUCCESS

By JOHN JAY DALEY.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—When Lieutenant John H. Towers "turned up" his hydro-aeroplane and made a reconnoitring trip of the city of Vera Cruz on Sunday he wrote the first chapter in the history of American aerial warfare.

If the siege of Vera Cruz accomplishes nothing more, it has demonstrated the value of aeronautical training in the army and navy, said officials of both these services.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels expressed the highest admiration for the "pluck and gallantry" of the young naval aviator.

According to the report received at the Navy Department from Admiral Fletcher, the flight not only demonstrated the value of an aeroplane in scouting, but it brought relief to those who were concerned for the safety of Americans in Mexico City. It was feared here that all railway communication between Vera Cruz and the capital city of Mexico have been destroyed.

DISPROVE OLD THEORY.

Lieutenant Towers' flight disproved this. From a height of 2,000 feet the aviator, with the help of a bright Mexican sun and strong glasses, was enabled to see far into the country. There, spread out below him, he saw the unbroken (on) threads of the rails leading toward the capital. Only the railway in the immediate vicinity and outskirts of Vera Cruz have been destroyed by the Mexicans, Lieutenant Towers reported.

The old idea that an aviator in time of war would have to fly so high that his observation would be impracticable was disproved by this flight, it was pointed out by Secretary Daniels. The secretary learned that even the smallest details pertaining to Mexico's land force movements were discernible by the aviator. At Soledad, twenty-four miles from Vera Cruz, where it was thought that 8,000 troops under General Maas were concentrated, Lieutenant Towers saw only seven soldiers with the aid of his powerful binoculars.

During the flight, Lieutenant Towers maintained a speed of fifty eight miles an hour. This enabled him to cover enough territory to report that the Mexican Federal troops have fled from the base of American activities at Vera Cruz.

REBELS HALT TRAINS CARRYING AMERICAN REFUGEES TO BORDER

NOGALES, Ari., April 27.—Refugee Americans who have arrived from the interior and the west coast of Mexico report that, although no violence was shown them, they were harrassed all the way to the border by petty rebel chiefs.

A freight train which came from points near Guaymas brought twenty-five Americans, nearly half of whom were women.

They reported that after being leered at en route they were compelled to get off the train several miles south of the Arizona border and were told by a rebel captain they would have to walk the rest of the way. It was only after argument that the train was permitted to proceed.

A. B. Case of Pomona, Calif., director of the Congregational Mission at Hermosillo, was one of the arrivals.

Most of the refugees applied to American Consul Simpton for aid and were given transportation to their homes.

Many Americans are still in remote parts of Mexico, but these are being brought out as fast as messengers can reach them.

Bay State Real Estate Exchange Hits Toll Plan

WHEREAS: There is now pending in the Senate of the United States a bill which seeks to repeal the existing law under which American ships are exempt from the payment of tolls in the use of the Panama Canal, and

WHEREAS: It is of vital importance to the industrial and commercial prosperity of our nation that American shipping, and especially the shipping trade between the Atlantic and Pacific coast points should be encouraged and supported by the National Government, and

WHEREAS: In our opinion the present exemption in favor of American shipping in the use of the canal is consistent with a reasonable construction of our treaty obligation with other nations;

THEREFORE: It is hereby RESOLVED that the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange is emphatically opposed to any repeal of the present law governing the use of the canal by American shipping, and it is further

RESOLVED: That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States and to the various members of Congress from this Commonwealth.

WILSON TOLL PLAN HIT BY REALTY MEN

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has adopted resolutions opposing the repeal of the present law governing the use of the Panama Canal by American shipping toll free and has sent copies of them to President Wilson and the Massachusetts delegation in Congress.

Upon the question of legislation now pending relative to the white slave traffic, a communication was received from the Rev. A. A. Berle of Cambridge, chairman of the moral and and social welfare committee of the Massachusetts Congregational Conference. Mr. Berle called attention to some current comment to the effect that real estate interests are said to be opposed to white slave legislation because of certain restriction in the use of property that would result.

He suggested that in his opinion such criticisms of the real estate men is a "brutal libel" and asked the exchange to go on record as to this matter. The board voted to instruct the secretary to advise Mr. Berle that the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange is unalterably opposed to the use of property for objectionable purposes, and that the organization will give its hearty support to any legislation that seeks to restrict and eliminate the conditions complained of.

TOLLS REPEAL NOW DOOMED IN THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The toll repeal bill, as it passed the House, is doomed in the Senate Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canal.

Senator Bristow of the committee says the bill will be reported either adversely or with amendments that will operate as an effective denial of the position taken by President Wilson.

Hearings, which have been going on now for more than a fortnight, and which probably will be concluded before night, have proved beyond doubt that in the estimation of men who figured in the ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the toll exemption section of the canal act is not in contravention of the treaty, as claimed by the President.

Not only has this been demonstrated by former Senators, who were of commanding influence in the Senate, like Foraker of Ohio, and Turner of Oregon, but publicists and men versed in international law have testified to the same end.

These hearings have brought out clearly the fallacy of the assertions of the advocates of repeal that in enacting this law Congress was going counter to the provisions of a treaty into which she had entered with full knowledge of the meaning of that treaty with respect to our management of the Panama Canal.

END MINE WAR, SAYS PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, April 7.—President Wilson has sent Representative Foster of Illinois to New York to appeal to John D. Rockefeller for a settlement of the labor troubles in the Southern Colorado coal fields, which have resulted already in many persons being killed and wounded.

The President wants Mr. Rockefeller either to grant concessions to the striking miners or to consent to the selection of an arbitration board which will end the trouble.

If Mr. Foster's mission fails, United States troops will be sent into Colorado to deal with the situation which the State militia has been unable to do, but the President is anxious to avoid using federal troops for this purpose and is going to make every possible effort to re-establish peaceful relations between the mining interests and the miners.

Representative Foster is chairman of the House Committee on Mines and Mining, and was chairman of the congressional committee which recently visited Colorado and made an investigation into the causes of the mine strike. A conference between Foster and Rockefeller is expected to take place at the Waldorf Hotel in New York. Mr. Rockefeller is the dominating factor in the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company. Unless he yields, it is said that the administration will order federal troops sent to the strike region tonight. Governor Ammons of Colorado reports he is unable to cope with the situation.

"If federal troops are not sent into Colorado to cope with the strike situation in and around Trinidad, civil war will ensue," said Representative Keating of Colorado after a conference with President Wilson today.

"The President has not yet decided whether he will order Federal troops in Colorado, but the conditions there certainly call for such action. The miners have lost all respect for the militia, and it is impossible for the State troops to handle the situation. A condition of anarchy and lawlessness prevails whic hit will be impossible to put down without the assistance of federal soldiers.

"If the government troops are sent to Trinidad I do not anticipate any resistance to them by the miners. NO the contrary I think that the soldiers will be received with open arms, for the miners desire only that some strong authority be placed in charge. They refuse to acknowledge the rule of the militia, whom they accuse of being in the pay of the mine owners.

"I think that the dispatch of a few companies of the Federal troops would result in the almost instant quelling of every dangerous crisis."

President John P. White of the United Mine Workers of America has called a special meeting of the miners' executive board for May 4 at Indianapolis to consider the calling of a strike of 500,000 miners throughout the country unless conditions in the southern Colorado fields improve.

Caillaux Re-elected as French Deputy; Thalmas Defeated

PARIS, April 27.—At the elections for members of the Chamber of Deputies throughout France, Joseph Caillaux, who resigned after the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, by Mme. Caillaux, and who decided to become a candidate for the chamber at the request of his friends, was re-elected.

Amedee Thalmas, the radical deputy, who wrote a letter defending the action of Mme. Caillaux, which was read in the chamber the day after the tragedy, was defeated.

In a referendum on suffrage conducted by a Paris newspaper 200,000 women voted on the question in Paris.

EPISODE IN NEW YORK APARTMENT CLIMAX OF PISANI DIVORCE

Mrs. "rixie J. Pisani, who secured a divirce from Albert Pisani, a wealthy New York railroad man. She named Mrs. Kathryn B. Parrott, wife of playwright Marion E. Parrott.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Justice Pendleton has granted to Mrs. Trixie Jennery Pisani an interlocutory decree of divorce from Albert Pisani, wealthy railroad man. Mrs. Kathryn B. Parrott, wife of Marion E. Parrott, the playwright, was named in the complaint.

The testimony showed that while Mrs. Pisani was visiting her mother in Boston, Mrs. Parrott visited the apartment of Mr. Pisani and remained there over night. The superintendent of the apartment house and a woman tenant so testified.

When the case was tried, Mrs. Parrott was subpoenaed as a witness. She was asked only one question regarding her connection with the divorce case. She demanded the right to deny the allegations, but the court ruled that she could not so testify, because she had not put in a formal appearance in the proceeding.

After the trial Mrs. Parrott said she would move to have the court hear her testimony, but she has not yet taken steps to do so.

MRS. EDDY NOW AIDS HER, SAYS MRS. STETSON

NEW YORK, April 27.—Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, who was excommunicated from the Mother Church of Christ, Scientist, in 1909, announces in a new book, "Vital Issues in Christian Science," that she is receiving the spiritual co-operation of the late Mary Baker Eddy.

"For twenty-five years Mrs. Eddy co-operated with me in the work of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, New York city," writes Mrs. Stetson. "During that time she publicly indorsed the scientific demonstrations made by me and my students and members of my church. She has continued to co-operate in her spiritual influence as impersonal Love, to help build on a 'wholly spiritual' foundation."

The book, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, is considered a sort of sequel to "Reminiscences, Letters and Correspondence," published by Mrs. Stetson last June, and in which she set herself up as the true teacher of Christian Science, as opposed to the directors of the Mother Church. In that volume she intimated that she regarded herself as the person to whom Mrs. Eddy intended the real authority of the Church should descend.

"I now feel," she says in her latest volume, "that I should no longer withhold from Christian Science the proofs that I have Mary Baker Eddy's sanction of my spiritual interests and of her teaching and her faith in my ability to demonstrate the power of spiritual and healing and to defend true Christian Science as taught by her."

The "proofs" to which Mrs. Stetson refers are numerous letters written to her by Mrs. Eddy reproduced in the book, which is published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Fac-simile reproductions of some of these letters are given in the back of the book, while the main part of the volume, 405 pages, is devoted to a review of the troubles that led to Mrs. Stetson's excommunication. The title page of the book says it is "a record of unsettled questions which arose in 1908 between the directors of the Mother Church, the First Church, Christ Scientist, Boston, and the First Church, Christ Scientist, New York City, eight of the nine trustees and sixteen of its practitioners."

The popular carbolized salves, he said, had been known to cause gangrene.

Readers in several instances telephoned the AMERICAN office after reading the Sunday AMERICAN to say that they indorsed the call for a general flag-raising heartily.

One man said over the 'phone:

"That flag article hit me just right; hit the kids, too. They want a flag, and they're going to have one just as soon as I can get into a store to buy one. We're going to have a flag-raising, and, as soon as we do, I'll write and tell you about it, or have one of the children write, if you'd rather."

That's a fine idea. Have a flag-raising at your house and let your boy or girl write to the Flag Editor of the AMERICAN telling why they did it. Have the letter short, because the Flag Editor expects thousands of letters the moment this flag-raising movement gets under way. Keep the letter down to 150 words; sign your name and address and send it to the Flag Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 82 Summer street, Boston.

You don't have to have a flagstaff on your house in order to hold a flag-raising. You can fly a flag over a piazza rail, or from a window, or from the limb of a tree or anywhere, just so long as you show the flag and let the world know that another patriot knows what the Stars and Stripes mean.

SEND TROOPS TO ULSTER; EXPECT MARTIAL LAW

LONDON, April 27.—Confirmation has been received of the report that the authorities are preparing to move troops into Ulster, and it is rumored that martial law will be proclaimed there.

The Liberal newspapers demand that the government adopt strong measures to bring to punishment all persons concerned in the importation from Germany of the consignment of about 10,000 rifles and a half-million rounds of ammunition, which was landed at isolated points on the coast of Ulster Friday night and distributed by means of automobiles to the various headquarters of the Ulster volunteers.

The Daily Mail's Dublin correspondent says that three infantry regiments have been ordered from Dublin to Ulster Monday. He adds that Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, was in Dublin Sunday directing the arrangements.

Mrs. Siegel Sues for Wedding Gifts

NEW YORK, April 27.—Through an order by United States District Judge Hough permitting her to sue the receivers for Henry Siegel and his estate, Mrs. Marie Vaughan Siegel, who already is suing her husband for a divorce, has filed an action in the Supreme Court to recover personal property at the Siegel Summer place, Driftwood, at Oriental Point, and in the Siegel city home. Mrs. Siegel alleges that many of the articles sought for were wedding presents to her.

CLEANLINESS

Is next to godliness, so be sure and "clean up" your place for the week beginning May 3rd. Paint and other requisites will be found advertised in the "Want Ad" columns of the Sunday Boston American.

TECH REGIMENT ALL READY TO DEFEND STATE

Should President Wilson issue a call for a large number of volunteers, the Technology Regiment, known in the militia roster as the 126th Massachusetts Reserves, might be called upon to defend the State.

If needed, all the sixteen hundred men could be called upon for State defence, but not for operations outside the State. For this reason enlistments will be individual and not in a body. The regiment is now under command of Cadet Colonel L. F. Hamilton of Medford. The other officers are: Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Chatfield, Major H. D. Bent, Major Parry Keller, Major T. D. Parsons, Captain C. R. Gardner, Regimental Adjutant Captain Bernard Landers and Color-Sergeant W. L. Dennen.

The company officers are as follows: A company, Captain M. F. Brand, Lieutenant L. Stone and Lieutenant L. W. Barrett; B company, Captain C. W. Harvey, Lieutenant R. E. DeMerritt and Lieutenant R. Mills; C company, Captain J. A. Tobey, Lieutenant A. L. Giles and Lieutenant W. G. Brown; D company, Captain F. A. Davis, Lieutenant H. L. Hickford and Lieutenant F. E. Stern; E company, Captain H. A. Storke, Lieutenant E. B. Storkman and Lieutenant A. C. Lieber; F company, Captain G. N. Althouse and Lieutenant P. L. Duff; G company, Captain H. G. Borden, Lieutenant H. A. Hands and Lieutenant T. F. Medweeney, and H company, Captain H. S. Curtis and Lieutenant G. W. Wyman.

TUFTS ATHLETES IN FIRST TRACK PRACTICE OF YEAR

TIME WROUGHT BIG CHANGE IN PENNANT CLUBS

By FRANK G. MENKE.

What wonderful changes come about in a few years in the makeup of a major ball club!

Back in 1907, 1908 and 1909 when the Detroit Tigers swept everything in the American League before them, they had a ball club that was featured at the time as one of the youngest and fastest in baseball history. It was predicted then that the Tiger aggregation, as it was constituted then, would last for many years.

But today, of that bunch of twenty-five athletes who grabbed off the 1907 pennant for Detroit, only two men remain in a Tiger uniform—Cobb and Crawford. Stanage, the catcher, who joined them in 1908, still is on the roster, and so are Moriarity and Bush, who joined a year later. These five are all that remains of the hundreds of players who have worn the Detroit regalia—these five alone have survived the crowd that showed its heels to the other American Leaguers a half dozen years ago.

Who hasn't heard of the wonderful Cub machine—the baseball outfit that always will be regarded as one of the greatest and most wonderful in baseball history? In 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1910 they landed at the crest of the National League—and landed there without much exertion.

SCHULTE ALONE REMAINS.

Except in 1908. In those days it looked as if that grand old machine was good for six to ten years more. But what has happened? The machine has been smashed, its main cogs removed and of the wonderful club that hung up so many records in 1906, 1907 and 1908, only one remains—Frank Schulte, the veteran outfielder. And it wouldn't be surprising if he was shunted off to the minors before the end of the year.

In 1910—less than four seasons ago—the machine, for the most part, was intact. And then disintegration began. This, aided by the experimenting of one Charles Webb Murphy, wrecked the works, and of that 1910 crew only Heinie Zimmerman and Schulte still wear the Cub uniforms.

The Brooklyn club won the National League pennant in 1916, surprising as it may seem. The team was made up of some wonderful ball players, but time has collected its toll, and every man who was on that team at that time has retired from baseball.

The Pittsburgh Pirates gathered together a great club in 1901, 1902, and 1903, and annexed three pennants in a row. Of the mighty band that labored in those days for the greater honor and glory of Pittsburgh, only one man still lingers in the ranks. And his name is Wagner. Ford Clarke, manager of the club now, was a player in those days, but he plays no longer. Age has stiffened his joints.

RED SOX LONG AGO.

Only Mathewson and Wiltse, pitchers, remain of the celebrated band of ball players that brought the pennant to New York in 1904 and 1905. There are only four men on the Pirates payroll today who were on the club when the Pittsburghers nabbed the National League pennant and also the world championship. Those men are Pitcher Adams, Catcher Gibson, Old Man Wagner and "Hans" Lobert, utility.

There is not one man in the Red Sox lineup today who was with the aggregation that won the pennant in 1903. All the stars of those days have gone either to the discard, to the minors, or to their graves. Ed Walsh, is the sole survivor of the world champion White Sox team of 1906, while Bender and Plank, and Harry Davis, who no longer plays, but as scout and coach, are the remains of the Athletic team that breezed along to a world championship in 1913.

In 1913, when the Giants won the National League pennant and forced the Red Sox to go eight games to win the world honors, McGraw had a team that looked as if it would hold together for many years.

It was a fast combination and made up principally of youth. Yet today more than half of the men who grabbed off a share of the Giants spoils are wearing Giant uniforms no longer. Only eleven men remain of the twenty-five who assisted McGraw in humoring the National League bunting.

Not a man remains either in the big league or in a White Sox uniform of the squad that won the 1909 pennant for Chicago. Jimmy Callahan and Clark Griffith, the star twirlers of the 1907 pennant winning White Sox, alone remain in the majors. But only as managers. Griffith never plays, but Callahan occasionally dons a uniform and shows the youths of this day and age what their papas used to do.

WHERE DO THEY GO?

Plank, Bender and Davis are the only ones left of the 1913 Athletics. All the others have gone their separate ways and landed, at last, in obscurity. Not one man remains in big league company of the 1914 pennant winning Red Sox.

Where do they go? Sometimes from the major league club to another. Sometimes directly to the minors. But sooner or later they find their way to the smaller leagues, and, as age creeps on, they go down the baseball ladder month after month, year after year, until they have reached the bottom. And then they drop off and are heard of no more in big league circles until the Grim Reaper comes along and claims them as his toll.

Some there are who still played on those championship clubs who still are in the majors, but with different clubs, to whom they were traded or sold. And a few others still linger in the big tent as managers, coaches and scouts. The lure of the game is strong for them, and no matter in what capacity it is they still like to linger each Spring and Summer where they can hear the crash of the bat against the ball; where they can hear the throng jump to its feet and shriek its plaudits. Even though the cheers are not for them, as they were in the days of old, the cheers still ring as music in their ears, and bring back to them so vividly the memories of the days when they were young and grabbed unto themselves the major portion of the spotlight—and the idolizing of the fans.

RITCHIE TELLS OF HIS BOUT WITH MANDOT

By WILLIE RITCHIE—NO. 14.

I arrived in New Orleans about the middle of June to get ready for Joe Mandot, whom I boxed June 24. The reception which I received was a whole lot different from the one they gave me in New York. The New Orleans sportsmen were all there to give me the welcome hand and I have had a warm spot in my heart for them since.

Mandot was right in his prime then. He was the lightweight champion of the South and they were boosting him for a battle with Wolgast.

The local champion was made a 10-to-7 favorite over me, and there were some bets at 2 to 1 on him before we entered the ring. Although the weather was sultry, I managed to whip myself into pretty good shape.

I really believe that I would have knocked Mandot out that night had I taken a chance. But I made up my mind that I had better fight a careful battle. I was a stranger in a strange land, and I realized that, if there was to be a shade, the local champion certainly would get it, for he was the big card.

Mandot Wouldn't Take Any Chances.

Mandot used his cleverness and would not even lead at me. The fight was a slow one for the first four or five rounds. He wanted me to lead and I tried to coax him on. The last four rounds found me doing most of the work. I was the aggressor. Although I confess that I did not connect with many good punches, I found Mandot to be a clever boy, who knew how to get away from a punch and how to lead with his left and score points. In fact, he proved to be about the cleverest boy I ever met.

As it was a no-decision fight, I did not get credit for winning. Two of the papers said that I had the lead, while two more called it a draw, so I felt well satisfied.

Right after the fight they gave me a chance to do a turn on the stage and I accepted a week's engagement. My act seemed to go pretty good. The sports of New Orleans treated me like a prince. I was presented with a handsome gold belt buckle and pearl stickpin, which I prize as highly as any gifts I ever received.

I left New Orleans for Los Angeles on July 1 on the Elks' special train, which was en route to Portland for the big convention. They honored me by taking me a guest.

Before departing for Los Angeles I was approached by Billy Nolan, who made the trip South to witness the Wolgast-Rivers battle and also to discuss a business proposition with me. We had a long conference, in which Nolan told me how I needed a manager and how he would be in a position to bring me to the front. I had a great deal of respect for him, having read how successful he was in getting so much money for Battling Nelson.

Ritchie Takes Nolan as His Manager.

A few days later I had another talk with Nolan and this time came to terms. We accepted an offer from Promoter Jim Coffroth to box twenty rounds with Ritchie in Frisco. But once more the old hard luck tale had to be told and this time the jinx was on me. I suffered great pain in my left wrist when I started to train. This was the result of an injury which I suffered in my first fight with Wolgast, several months before. I had to call the fight off.

Nolan and I went up to his ranch a few days later.

I just laid around for about six weeks, taking things easy and building up.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 27.—In the third round of the international chess tourney Gunsberg lost to Tarrasch, and Blackburne, Niemzowitsch, Marshall and Rubinstein drew respectively with Bernstein, Alechine, Leskes and Capablanca.

Russia Taking an Interest in Sports

That Russia is making a tremendous effort to break away from the background of the sporting world is evidenced by reports from St. Petersburg.

The details of the new "Department of Physical Culture" breathes a workmanlike spirit. The department is controlled by a chief superintendent, who is assisted by a board composed of representatives of all branches of sport. Lawn tennis, rowing, football and yachting are the games which will receive the most serious attention.

BOXING GAME IS DOOMED IN COAST CITIES

By TOM THORP.

The Puritanic wave of reform that has been slowly but surely sweeping across this great, free and independent country of ours has at last washed the sand-covered shores of good old California. Boxing within her boundaries is doomed.

The only State where the boxing game has been left unmolested, with the exception of Nevada, is today stirred up to a high pitch of agitation over the fact that the reformers have taken possession of the Capitol at Sacramento, and declare that the year 1914 will see the last days of the twenty-round bouts.

The days of the finish fights that have made the State famous are numbered.

The first wreck that these crusaders have left in their wake are the resorts of the famous old Barbary coast. Not satisfied with their work in putting an end to these resorts of amusement, they have trained their guns on the fight clubs of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Oakland, Vernon, Stockton, Sacramento and the famous old Point Richmond Arena, and before they have completed their so-called reformation they will have disabled the sporting game in California to such an extent that to re-establish it on its same sound basis will be practically out of the question.

Washington May Get Army-Navy Game

NEW YORK, April 27.—In an effort to settle the controversy between the Army and Navy athletic authorities over the location of the 1914 football game, the Army and Navy Club at Washington has suggested a compromise which gives the Middies the privilege of selecting Washington this year and permits West Point to choose New York in 1915.

News that such a compromise had been suggested served to make those interested in bringing the Army-Navy game to this city next Fall redouble their efforts to make the contest an annual event in New York city.

Carpentier Planning Tour of the World

PARIS, April 27.—There is every chance that the proposed visit of Georges Carpentier to Australia will be carried out. M. Francois Descamp, Carpentier's manager, is at present working on the contract.

Shaefer to Play Here.

The followers of billiards in Boston will have another opportunity of seeing some high-class work at the balkline game before the season comes to a close when "Young Jake Shaefer, the eighteen-year-old wonder, appears at the White Bear room on May 4, 5 and 6. During his stay here Shaefer will have as opponents the very best players that Miah Murray can obtain.

AL M'COY HAS GRIP ON 158 POUND TITLE

NEW YORK, April 27.—That very much rehashed story as to who has the clearest title to the middleweight championship, has once again, by the unexpected defeat of the self-proclaimed title holder, George Chip of Newcastle, at the hands of an altogether unknown scrapper by the name of "Al" McCoy before the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn, been reopened. So much so that it is today the topic of conversation wherever members of the sporting fraternity meet.

Many fight fans are of the opinion that if McCoy, or Albert Rodolph, as he is known to his family, were to engage in a finish encounter with Eddie McGoorty, Jimmy Clabby, Billy Murray or Mike Gibbons, the songs of praise would be somewhat changed in text.

The victory over Chip, however, gives McCoy the clear title to engage in a championship encounter, and at the same time the prestige to dictate time, place, weight and necessary guarantee. He is without doubt a wonderful specimen of the up-to-date fighting game.

Wolgast Pays Tax on $45,000 Ring Gains

CADILLAC, Mich., April 27.—Prize fighting nets the United States government money. If many scrappers pay as large an income tax as Ad Wolgast Uncle Sam must receive a neat sum from pugilists.

Wolgast's report to the revenue collector at Grand Rapids, just accepted, shows that the Cadillac pugilist earned $75,000 during the ten months of 1913 in which the income tax law was in operation. Of this sum Ad was permitted to deduct 40 per cent for training expenses and manager's salary, leaving the "Wildcat" $45,000 to pay a tax on. His check, sent to Grand Rapids this week, was just $229.

Wolgast and Rivers Renew 2-Year Feud

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 27.—Matchmaker Tom McCarrey has signed ex-lightweight Champion Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers for a twenty-round bout at Vernon, Cal., on May 22. Wolgast defeated Rivers in a recent bout in the Middle West.

The same pair fought at McCarey's club on July 4, 1912, and the bout ended unsatisfactorily. Many contended that Wolgast had fouled the Mexican and should have been disqualified, but the referee counted Rivers out.

TUFTS COLLEGE TRACK SEASON OPENED TODAY

The Tufts College Track season opens today when the candidates report on the Oval for the first practice of the year. Manager Everett A. Geer and Captain "Larry" Teel have issued the call for candidates and will have charge of the men pending the decision of the Athletic Board as to who will coach the team.

"Jack" MacDonald seems to have the call on the other candidates for the coaching job, and when it is remembered what wonders he accomplished last season with the men it is sincerely hoped that he gets the job.

Manager Geer announced that an intercollegiate track meet has been arranged with Rhode Island State College to be held at Medford on May 14. This gives the candidates but three weeks to get into shape and they will have to hustle.

RED SOX MEET THE SENATORS IN LAST GAME

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—For the last game of the present Red Sox-Senator series here, Manager Carrigan will probably chose out his star lefthand youngster, Dutch Leonard, while Griffith, in a final attempt to stop the flying Boston squad, will fall back on his premier portside proposition, Mr. Boehling.

The latter, in his appearance in Boston against the red-hosed gentlemen, shut them out with three hits, but that isn't worrying them very greatly, as since those now far-off days they have recovered their batting eyes and are taking slams at any and all comers.

The fact that they were able to lambaste the mighty peril of the Potomac for five runs last week, has made the team as cocky as can be, and any pitcher seems due for rocks facing them.

Boehling, however, had their number last year and apparently the old spell was working when he started on this season. But then, the same thing was true of the great Walter.

Larry Gardner, who has been on the injured list for the past few days, has come around all right and will be at third when the battle opens.

After playing today, the Sox will jump for New York, where they will have a setto with Frank Chance's rejuvenated bunch of Highlanders.

Boston Fans Raising Fund to Aid Criger

Lou Criger, the famous Red Sox catcher, is ill in Boston. Criger came here from the West to undergo treatment in care of Dr. H. A. Christian, who, when he learned of the old ball player's condition, volunteered to aid him. Lou came here as a last resort. He has suffered from general tuberculosis for several years.

Criger is penniless, and the Boston baseball fans of the old pennant days are banding together to help their old favorite. Contributions will be received by John F. Morrill, at Wright & Ditson's, and the fund will be started today.

Connecticut Fans See Sunday Ball

NEW HAVEN, April 27.—Owners of franchises in the Eastern Association see a faint ray of hope for Sunday ball playing this Summer in a decision in the Orange Town Court, in which Judge Bryant decided that moving pictures did not disturb the quiet and peace of a community on Sunday. The decision was handed down upon cases growing out from a raid at Savin Rock, just outside of New Haven, two weeks ago, when twenty men were arrested for violation of the Sunday observance law.

Plan Olympic Baseball.

BERLIN, April 27.—In the hopes of interesting the German Olympic committee for 1916 in including a baseball program in the Olympic events, the mammoth stadium has been engaged for May 23, when two baseball teams of the International Baseball League of England will come here for an exhibition game.

Food for Sport Fans

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

SILVER LINING.

Who cares if raincloods fill the Summer sky
And all is dark and gloomy to the eye?
A little rainstorm doesn't hurt at all,
And means a double-header bye and bye.

The average baseball magnate is much like the average fight manager. He is simply a necessary evil.

"Willard is the greatest living heavyweight," says Tom Jones. This is the worst knock ever handed to the heavyweight class.

After reading the statements put forth by Ban Johnson and Jim Gilmore we have an ableBodied suspicion that one of them is eligible to the Ananias Club.

We don't know what misery Earl Hamilton will draw for playing with the Browns this year, but the job is worth all he can get.

WHAT'S THE USE?

Why hand out baseball contracts
When the contracts all are vain?
The only way to hold them is to use a ball and chain.

We are glad to hear that Charlie Thomas is taking advice from Garry Herrmann. Garry can tell anyone a baseball team should not be run.

Mr. Herrmann may have been justified in abolishing the thirst emporium in his ball park, but the fact remains that it was the only effective antidote for the brand of baseball players in Cincinnati.

As a result of their recent experience in Philadelphia, the Braves hope the Feds will not disrupt any more National League teams.

From the careless way in which he flies his players one would think Charlie Herzog was managing the team.

THE "ROOKIE" INFIELDER.

The stops he makes would give a man a sharp and sudden shock,
He scoops them up where other men would miss them by a block.
He seldom lets a vicious drive escape his grasping hand,
And yet he boots the easy ones and heaves them to the stand.

The Canadians will get a bonus of 20 per cent of their year's pay if they finish in third place. If they figure on living on that bonus we fear they are destined to starve.

Colonel Hedges has not made any such offer to the Browns. He is too much of a gentleman to poke fun at his athletes.

If you don't believe this is Spring, the fact that the Giants and Athletics are in the second division ought to be enough to convince you.

Our baseball magnates would gladly march to the front if they were allowed to fight with injunctions at twenty paces.

As we understand it, Charlie Herzog is going to run his athletes, even if he has to run them out of the National League.

We fear that Herzog would not protest overmuch if a few of the Cincinnati directors were to jump to the Feds.

But Nelson writes that he will perpetrate no vaudeville stunt in Detroit next week, wearing a soup-and-fish uniform. There is so much excitement in the air these days that a man can get by with almost anything.

FREDDY WELSH BATTLES CROSS IN COAST BOUT

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Al Norton vs. Jack Dillon at Kansas City.

Billy Walters vs. Spike Kelly at St. Louis.

Eddie Campi vs. Loubiana at Philadelphia; Young Dyson vs. Billy Bennett at New York.

By JACK CONWAY.

FREDDY WELSH, the English lightweight champion, still rules a 10 to 6 favorite for his twelve-round bout with Leach Cross, which will be staged in Los Angeles tomorrow. The tussle is the most important of the week and has aroused a great deal of interest. This is probably because the contest is an international affair and also a "go" to decide whether Welsh or Cross will clash with Willie Ritchie in a world's championship battle on July 4.

Welsh's remarkable speed and skill have enabled him to win a place among the world's leading 133-pound boxers. The Englishman was never a hard puncher and has usually been forced to depend upon his cleverness and knowledge of ring craft in order to defeat his opponents.

The English title holder has even gone so far as to assert that he is the real world's lightweight champion. He bases his claim on the referee's decision he received over Ritchie when the latter was first beginning to attract attention.

Hoxing "fans" have not taken Welsh seriously. There is only one way for a boxer to win a title from another ring man and that is by defeating him when he holds the championship. Matty Baldwin vanquished Ritchie in the "Frisco boy's first twenty-round encounter, but the Charlestown "Bearcat" has not made any ridiculous statements claiming that he is king of the 133-pound glove men.

CROSS' only chance of defeating Welsh tomorrow, is by landing several of his famous punches. The New Yorker is not a clever boxer and if he attempts to outbox Welsh he is doomed to defeat. But if Leachie can get in, close and score with a few hard blows, Welsh may forget what he knows about skillful boxing.

There are few, if any, lightweights who can punch as hard as Cross. He can knock out an opponent with either hand, and it is this ability which has placed him among the foremost lightweights in the world. Cross may be outpointed by an opponent for nine rounds, but has a habit of turning the tide of battle with a single punch.

THE winner of tomorrow's bout has been promised a battle with Willie Ritchie, to be staged in Los Angeles on July 4. Ritchie is desirous of proving that he has not an equal in the lightweight class, and is perfectly willing to fight any man whom the promoters may select to meet him, provided he is offered proper financial inducements.

JIM COFFEY is creating quite a stir among the dear old "white hopes" The Dublin giant's most recent ring feat was to knock out Jim Flynn, the battle-scarred Pueblo fireman, whom some of us were led to believe was immune to punishment. Jim Corbett says that Coffey is the most promising white heavyweight he has seen for some time. With all respect to Coffey's ability as a fighter, he will have a difficult task succeeding within the hemp ropes, now that Corbett has touted him as a wonder.

A LARGE number of "fans" will journey to Cambridge Friday evening to see Eddie Murphy of South Boston and Johnny Dohan, who hails from Brooklyn, clash in a ten-round bout before the University A. C. Murphy has been made a favorite, but Dohan is a rugged, two-handed fighter and should make things interesting for the Peninsula idol.

BRAVES REST TODAY; GIANTS HERE TUESDAY

"No game today—Rain" was the announcement sent out from the Braves headquarters as soon as it was evident that the storm would prevent the Stallings bunch from mixing with the Brooklynas in the final battle of the series. As soon as the announcement was made the Brooklyn players packed up and started for home, where tomorrow they open a series with the Phillies. Manager Robinson was very well satisfied to take two out of three from the Braves.

Tomorrow the New York Giants, headed by John McGraw, appear on the South End Grounds to play a four-game series with the Braves. The Giants are not in the very best shape in spite of their long and arduous training trip to Marlin Springs, Texas. But McGraw can be depended upon to drive his team to the limit in order to crowd as many wins as possible. The little manager is keen on winning early in the season to get the jump on the other fellows, but so far he has not done so very well. However the season was three weeks gone last year before the Giants got going in proper style. After that they made a runaway race of it.

Bennetts in Field for New Honors

After a year of inactivity, the Bennett A. A. of Somerville has reorganized its baseball team for the season. With but a few exceptions the team will be composed of practically the same players who made such an enviable record two years ago. The nine will be captained by "Chet" Martin, and he will also take care of third base. Danny Martin and Walter Quinn will be the battery. The team is entered as one of four comprising the Somerville City League. The Bennetts are without a game for next Saturday and would like to hear from some fast semi-pro team. Manager George Lawlor, No. 15 Columbus avenue, Somerville.

Vardon and Ray Call Off Trip to America

According to Alex Findlay, who received a letter from Edyard Ray a few days ago, this country will see neither Vardon nor Ray in the open championship tournament at Midlothian next August.

In his letter Ray wrote that in all probability he would not be able to come over this Summer, but that he fully intended to make the 1915 trip. His reason is that he will be busy all Summer with matches at home. He also adds that in his opinion the August date is a trifle early.

Findlay is also in receipt of a letter from Harry Vardon, in which the five-time champion of Great Britain said that he did not think there was any possibility of his making the journey this Summer, and added that there was little likelihood, so far as he could see, of any of the British professionals crossing.

White Sox Boast of Another Waddell

CHICAGO, April 27.—Catcher Bill Sullivan thinks that in Quarders, a southpaw rookie, the White Sox have a second Rube Waddell. He is taking him in hand and trying to develop him as he did Tex Russell. The catchers say that Quarders has more speed than Tex ever had.

After nearly taking Catcher Mayer's hand off during the practice period with some of his speeders, Quarders shook his head regretfully.

"I can't seem to get the old zip on the ball," he sighed mournfully. "But it always takes a month or so before I get that speed."

Even then Quarders had so much steam that Mayer almost hated to catch him.

Ed. Walsh, who saw him pitch up in Wisconsin, says the youngster will make good.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THAT gent which just went out," said the Manicure Lady, "is the first religious gent that has been in here to have his nails did since I can remember. He is a Methodist, he says, and he is proud of it."

"I never could see much to that 'proud of it' stuff," said the Head Barber. "Every once in awhile some gink comes in here to get shaved, and if anything comes up about the different nations, he will say, 'I'm an Irishman and I'm proud of it,' or 'I'm a Scotchman and I'm proud of it.'"

"That is patriotism, George," said the Manicure Lady. "It shows that the gent loves the soil from which he has sprung from."

"I can't see it that way," said the Head Barber. "To me that kind of a remark always seemed foolish. It always seemed like the fellow saying, 'I'm an Irishman and I'm not ashamed of it.' Why shouldn't a man be proud of his nationality without having to tell everybody so? I'm a Scotchman myself, but I don't think it is necessary for me to tell every man I meet that I am proud of it. That ought to go without saying."

"Well, anyhow," persisted the Manicure Lady, "this gent that was just in here has nails did said that he was a Methodist and was proud of it, and I guess he is, though father's brother was a Methodist and whether he was proud of it or not I know the old gent wasn't proud of his brother, he was one of them kind of brothers that is all the time getting into some kind of a scrape and then coming around to a older brother to get dough enough to help him out so the rest of the church members wouldn't know. I don't mean, George, that I have a bit of fault to find with his religious notions, and I suppose that he would have been the same kind of a wart if he had belonged to any other denomination. I just mean that if he was proud of being the kind of a church member he was that must have been the only thing in his whole life that he ever had a right to be proud of.

"This gent that was in here today was telling me that he had only just religion lately, having went to hear one of them revivalists that goes around the country doing the best they can for everybody and then selves. He said that for years he had walked in the ways of sin, though goodness knows he don't look like none of the old sports that comes in here sometimes, the kind that has reached the limit. He was a kind of a vacant looking person, and it seemed to me when I gave him the glance that he never walked no ways of sin unless somebody had a rope around his neck leading him, for he is a easy, at that, and told him that I thought it was wonderful how a gent could come to a better life after having been a cut-up.

"I have often wondered, George, if it wouldn't be a good idea for a lot of us to get religion before we die, but somehow I feel better with the religion I learned at home than I would if I went out and got a new lot of it. Then I would be all different and up in the air, and I don't think that would be good for the spiritual side of me."

"I don't know much about it," said the Head Barber, "but I never believed that you could make folks over much after they growed up, and I don't think I would know how to get any new religion now. Religion may get me when I ain't looking, but I won't get religion from no evangelist. I wouldn't know what to do with it after he had left town."

Do You Know That—

Experts say that, for smoking, tobacco is one of the least injurious substances known. Compared with other well-known vegetable substances used for the same purpose, tobacco is very mild.

The most valuable cargo ever carried by a shipwrecked vessel was that aboard the British frigate De Brook, lost off Lewes in 1798. She had aboard jewels and specie worth $10,400,000.

Horses, giraffes and ostriches have the largest eyes of all terrestrial animals, but among marine animals there are cephalopods, or Ink fishes, which have eyes as large as a plate.

CHAPTER VII.

UNDER the mass of splintered wood Adolph Hardy was found, his head buried in his arms just as he had fallen. The framework of the mill had been so old and warped that, with the explosion of the bombs the thing had collapsed, and Hardy had been buried in the debris before the more destructive work of the bombs had been able to disfigure him in any way. It seemed almost uncanny that the man should have been preserved in so remarkable a manner.

The Dawsbergen men carried him away from the smoking ruins and placed him on the ground beside George Modzel. Two men, bitterest enemies in war were now, in death, lying side by side. The men in silence removed their caps, and there was a brief military salute. Then Lieutenant Maxim knelt beside the stranger and carefully made a systematic search of his person.

"He was carrying dispatches; we are sure of that," he said, as nothing of importance came to light. "Nothing that could possibly identify him, either, but of course he had plenty of time to make away with any papers after he had reached the mill. Anyway, there's nothing here." Then something on the watch chain of the man caught his attention, and he bent lower to examine the tiny locket which hung there.

THE TRINKET.

"Some girl's trinket," he muttered. "Poor devil! you won't have much use for it now," and carefully detaching it, he fastened it on his own chain under his military coat. The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small. And little did the young lieutenant know, as he carelessly took possession of the locket, that some day, not so very far distant, that same locket would rob him of the thing that he wanted more than anything else in the world.

Far away at Lisely Cottage life was dragging out a slow existence for Helene Modzel. News of the happenings of the war was slow in coming, and often there were days that elapsed before anything definite could be learned.

Helene had few memories to torture her, for until the day when Hardy had taken leave of them he had never even touched her. There was just that short time at the gate —even now the memory of it made her heart beat fast—the sudden flame in his blue eyes, the shaking of the world under her feet as he had caught her up against him, and the lesson she had learned too late in the touch of his mouth on hers. And because of the sudden, strange sweetness of it all, she was still the same Helene; she would not allow her mind to dwell upon the awful side of war; she sang around the house until her father and mother rejoiced with her. It was impossible not to be strong and have faith in the presence of such unbounding confidence as Helene's.

And then suddenly out of Life's joy there came a day when Helene's laughter was stilled. The news of George's death had reached them at last and Adolph Hardy was reported missing. The newspapers were filled with the mysterious Gergstern aviator, and full particulars of his flight to the mill and of the ensuing death of Lieutenant Modzel were given. As yet the name of the death-dealing aviator had not been ascertained. With the news of George's death, Helene's confidence had received an awful blow. She began to waver in her belief that some day Hardy would surely come back.

Life had changed its perspective for her and she had begun to grow a little bitter.

Then one day a stranger came again to the home of the Modzels. Helene, coming in from the outside just as she had done on that day so long ago found him in close consultation with her father.

THE STRANGER

"This is my daughter," said her father, as the stranger arose, and she smiled a little conventionally at the quick admiration in his eyes.

"Lieutenant Maxim was present at the storming of the mill, Helene," her father went on, "He brings us great news of George."

"Your brother died the death of a soldier," said the young lieutenant, with quick praise. "His last words were to the effect that he would do it all over again for the glory of Dawsbergen."

Helene sat with her face a little averted. It wasn't that she didn't exult in George's bravery, but there seemed to be something dead within her, something that she could not bring to life, something of the horror of war itself—that had settled all over her. It seemed almost as if she must scream to the soldier to stop. She couldn't bear to hear any of the terrible things he was saying.

Lieutenant Maxim handed the wallet and letters to Mr. Modzel. The old man was thrilling all over at the news of his son's bravery and he touched the papers reverently as though they were a message from the dead.

"And this young man who was blown up in the mill?" he inquired finally. "You say that his name has not as yet been ascertained?"

"We have no idea of his identity," said the Lieutenant, thoughtfully. "But he was a brave man, a man any of us would have been proud to know."

Helene had listened intently to every word of the conversation, and the thought uppermost in her mind was of her lover. She turned to the Lieutenant with a faint smile and looked at him questioningly. Keen dark eyes and crisp curly brown hair seemed to be his chief characteristics. Indeed he was very good to look upon, but to Helene he meant simply a man, a soldier, some one who might know something more about the enemy than she had already heard.

"And Lieutenant Hardy, of Berestern?" she inquired, keeping all emotion out of her voice and meeting his gaze with deep, unfathomable eyes. "He was a great friend of my brother. Have you by any chance heard anything of him?"

"He was reported missing, Miss Modzel, I'm afraid that there is little hope of the fact that he is still living!"

"Thank you," she said briefly, as he rose to go. "I am sorry."

That was all, and yet on the way back to rejoin his regiment, Lieutenant Maxim suddenly remembered that question.

"I'll bet she loved this Hardy," he said to himself with sudden conviction. "God, it would be worth while to be loved by a woman like that!"

Why Don't the Men Propose?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Why don't the men propose, Mamma?
Why don't the men propose?
Each season's just coming to the point,
And then away he goes!
I've hopes when some distingue beau
A glance upon me throws;
But though he'll dance and smile, and flirt,
Alas! he won't propose."

—Thomas Haynes Bayly.

MAYBELLE writes:

"I am twenty-two and for the past year and a half have been keeping steady company with a young man. He has taken almost all of my time, but never speaks of getting married. Would you advise me to bring up the subject?"

Grace has been treated even less kindly. "I am twenty-three," she writes, "and a man five years my senior has given me his entire attention for four years. He treats me well, but has never yet broached the subject I want him to. It would break my heart to give him up."

"Perplexed" is in the same predicament. "I have been keeping company with a young man for the past year, and though he has told me several times his attentions are serious, and has given me several gifts, he has said nothing about settling down. I have received proposals of marriage from other men, but, loving this man first, I did not encourage the others. There is one among them very persistent, who says he will not give me up till I reach the altar with another man. Now, while I do not want to force things, do you think I should tell him about the other man?"

A MODERN FABLE

If the story of the dog in the manger had been written these days, when for psychological reasons the question of sex is of paramount interest and becomes a factor in the solution of motives and actions, the narrator might have said in the beginning:

"Now the dog did not want the hay till the ox showed a desire for it, when the dog, being a MALE, insulted up and showed his teeth and drove the ox away."

There are young men who spend all their time with certain girls, and take up all the time the girls have, for no other reason than that they are keeping other men away. Perhaps unconsciously we let us give them the much credit. They began by calling, found it agreeable, enjoyed the girl, liked the easy air of welcome that intimate relations with the daughter secured for them in her home, and got the habit. Nothing more than that. If they had more money the same desire for a leading place would find satisfaction in some expensive club, but lacking the means for that they hang around the home of some girl.

Matrimony does not enter such man's head because the girl lets him see he has possession of her heart without it. He does not make it a fine point to be gallant in offering her attention. He knows if he telephones her at 7:30 to be ready to go to a theatre with him at 8, she will be ready. And PLEASED!

A QUESTION

I want to ask you three troubled girls—and how often does your young man hear you say: "I have a previous engagement?"

Never, I will warrant you. He is keeping other young men away; he is enjoying himself; he thinks he is doing the right thing by you because he gives you His Most Honorable and Adorable Company three or four nights a week, occasionally throwing in a theatre ticket your way to some show he wants to see himself.

My dears, you can't propose. You can't even hint at a proposal without cheapening yourself, and hearing (if your proposal is accepted, which I doubt) to the end of your days that you asked him to marry you.

You can't drive him to the altar with a club, but you can get him there by letting him see that he hasn't the right of monopoly, and that only an engagement ring gives that right.

Praise Indeed.

It was after the Christmas party, and the mistress of the household was preparing to retire. As her faithful maid brushed out her hair, the mistress asked:

"How did you like Miss Fitzlaurence's singing, Jane?"

"Oh, mum," replied the maid, "she was 'eavenly! She sang just as if she was gargling!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU SHOULD BE PLEASED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and during the past two years have been keeping steady company with a young man one year my senior. We love each other dearly and never had a quarrel together, excepting that every time he sees me he requests that I name the night when I shall see him next. He thinks it is my place and I think it is his. He says it is mine because he does not know what nights I can see him.

W. Z. D. T.

HE shows both a desire to be in your company and a consideration of your wishes. Don't quarrel over that. Rather be glad he is as he is.

KEEP ON REFUSING.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A few days ago I was introduced to a young man and ever since then he has been sending me flowers and calling on me. I told him I did not care for his attentions, but he persists in forcing them upon me.

LILLIE.

HE shows himself to be very persistent, and if qualified in every way to be your sweetheart, I am sure he will win that enviable place.

But keep on refusing. The result will be interesting.

DON'T CRITICIZE; ACT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been engaged to a young man for a year. Recently upon meeting an old friend of his he took her home. He also goes to dances, etc. without me.

ANXIOUS

IF you show your displeasure he will regard it as unreasonable jealousy and will persist in his conduct. Suppose you invite other young men up, and occasionally go out with one of them?

FORBES TAKES UP VALUES OF REALTY BONDS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

Said a voice over the telephone:

"Should I buy—real estate bonds? I can pay for them on the instalment plan—for fifteen years, if I live. I think this would encourage me to save all the time."

My reply was: "Don't!"

I have been delving into real estate "bonds." Nine-tenths of them are to be avoided. Many of them are not bonds at all, but mere I. O. U's with no security worth considering behind them. Indeed, certain of the instalment-payment variety make you, when you agree to buy them, not an investor, but a DEBTOR of the issuing company! They have a claim upon you for the full amount you undertake to contribute. You have no real claim upon any assets whatsoever.

* * *

Read the extract from a real statement drawn up by William D. Gentle, the prominent New York lawyer, on behalf of certain of the Bowling Alleys Realty investment corporations and other real estate corporations:

"There can be no doubt that all legal mortgages, loan or investment corporations have during the past been engaged in the flotation and sale of fraudulent securities to such an extent as to cause a public scandal."

The AMERICAN'S real estate department has rendered the country unusual service in exposing gigantic stock and real estate swindling schemes. Many concerns which lured money from persons who believed they were buying real estate instead of fake or semi-fake pieces of paper. Lawyer Guthrie did not overstate the facts concerning the prevalence of such frauds.

* * *

I have taken the trouble to read through his whole brief in defense of the ill-starred Nonanton Corporation, and if I had any doubts as to the untrustworthiness of "real estate" obligations such as that concern and others have been foisting upon the public, his arguments—in favor of the company, mind you—would have dispelled them. I finished the lengthy document with the impression that the sale of "investment bonds" like the Nonaton and its kind are ideal things to let severely alone.

* * *

The losses sustained by the unwary public have mounted into tens of millions—mainly for so-called real estate bonds. I have already quoted millions, and I rather think the worst has not yet happened.

* * *

Mr. Guthrie did not like the lower court's decision in the Nonaton case, and, in his brief he says:

"It is submitted that the court below erred in holding that the obligations issued and disposed of by the defendant corporation showed on their face that the defendant was not engaged in a legitimate real estate business as contemplated by the Business Corporations Law; but on the contrary was actually engaged in carrying on the business of discounting evidences of debt or of receiving deposits of or mortgage, loan or investment corporations. This being so, the order of the Appellate Division should be reversed."

* * *

The decision pleased those who like to see fighting for honest deals—more than it pleased the defendant company. And now that Governor Glynn of New York has signed the bill championed by the American to bring scheming "real estate" corporations as the Nonaton under State regulation, the way has been paved for driving swindlers and fakirs out of business.

* * *

There are legitimate real estate bonds—the Chicago concern, for example, has done an extensive and honorable business on them for many years with profitable results to buyers. Certain local corporations also issue sound investments based on real estate.

* * *

But the average investor should not touch a "real estate bond" without first consulting some capable, disinterested authority. Investigate before investing.

* * *

The telephone inquirer was keenly disappointed when warned not to undertake to pay instalments on a real estate bond.

"But you must have something else. Things can't be bought by instalments nowadays," he protested.

* * *

My advice was to write to a stock exchange house which makes a specialty of buying bonds on instalments for investors on a partial payment plan. This system of dealing in bonds has been sanctioned by the New York Stock Exchange, and is well considered, after thorough investigation by several eminent economists and bankers.

* * *

I have not yet studied every clause of this form of supplying investments to those who cannot buy for cash and pay specific amounts month by month. I shall make it my business to do so and write a special article on the subject.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were strong this afternoon, owing to the hope that this country will not become involved in a long and costly war, and in New York were influenced by the closing quotations in London. Gold 1¾, Southern Pacific 1¾, Steel 1¾, Amalgamated 1¾, American Smelting 2⅝, Union Pacific 1⅜, Mexican Petroleum 1 and New York Central 2⅛.

Opening gains in Boston were: Pullman Palace 2, Allouez 1, Amalgamated Copper 1, Allouez 1, Copper Range 1⅛, Boston & Maine 1⅛, United Fruit 1¼, Butte & Superior 1, Calumet & Arizona 1¼, Granby 1 and Osceola 1⅛.

The effect of reports that Huerta is likely to accept mediation by South American republics and that war between Mexico and United States may be averted was an early rebound in the prices of stocks. The cause of a number of corporations having large property interests south of the Rio Grande advanced the most. Mexican Petroleum rising more than eleven points at the opening and making further gains before receding. Among others to advance substantially at the start were Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Reading, New York Central, Telephone, American Can, Steel, Amalgamated, American Smelting.

Following the rise the market was a little reaction and all early advances were not held. Trading was active during that period, transactions totaling nearly 165,000 shares.

AMERICANS HIGHER IN LONDON.

Americans had been higher in London, where the opening of the week were highly satisfactory to speculators. The carry-over rate on international indicated that the bull account was not large at the close of the fortnightly settlement period. Among the latter, Canadian Pacific was the strongest issue. Reports that the Inter-state Commerce Commission would not affect the British market much, and more attention abroad was given to the Mexican situation. It is reported to be a big market factor, both in Paris and Berlin. Among Americans to show the largest gains in London were Amalgamated, Anaconda, Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Steel.

TRADING SOON SLACKENED.

There was a good deal of covering during the first half of the morning and in the latter half trading slackened. The demand for stockwatson notwithstanding midday and at that time markets were rather dull.

In Boston, which followed the London and New York lead, business was broad and active at the beginning and the local list advanced much higher as to prices at the outset. Among issues to sho wthe largest gains were Amalgamated, Anaconda, Boston & Albany, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Steel.

Mexican Murder and Rapine Not Matters for Mediation. Only by War Can Mexico Be Saved for Civilization

IN this moment of public discussion of the futile suggestion of mediation between the United States and "a person calling himself President de facto of Mexico," a mediation to settle matters of international controversy which the President of the United States has refused to describe himself, or to permit Congress to describe, Mr. William Randolph Hearst addresses to the editor in charge of this paper the following letter:

To the Editor of the Boston AMERICAN:

"The situation at Washington will cause every patriotic American citizen to hang his head in humiliation today.

"Never before has the United States proposed to arbitrate a question of honor or to allow mediation on matters so immediately affecting the dignity of the nation and the self-respect of the citizens.

"Never before has the United States proposed to submit to other nations the question of whether or not a hostile nation had the right to murder American citizens and insult the American nation.

"It is unfortunate that we have at the head of our government gentlemen of impractical theories and petty prejudices at a time of national crisis. But it is not vital in its importance or determining in its consequences.

"Let every patriotic American citizen lift his head and look forward and upward with courage and confidence. Let him look at the red, white and blue of his flag and remember every righteous cause that it has represented and carried through to victory. Let him look upward to the blue of heaven and remember that there is a power greater than any on earth that causes the right to triumph.

"This nation will prosper and progress as long as it deserves to prosper and progress, as long as its strength is used in the defence of its rights and its liberties.

"This war with Mexico is a war in defence of the rights and liberties of our people, of the lives of our people. It is a war for progress, for civilization, for advancement and enlightenment, for the protection of our people and of the honest, peaceful part of the Mexican people, and for the welfare of the world.

"Righteous wars seem superficially to be made by men, but they must surely be destined by God. They are part of the scheme of civilization, part of the plan of progress. Liberty has been won by war and the sword has often cut the path for the advance of enlightenment, the march of progress.

"The settler who clears the forest and burns the brush, in order to make a fertile farm out of a wild and inhospitable tract, incommodes the animals and vermin which have infested the forest. But he is doing his share toward the advancement of the human race and the progress of civilization. Tangled forests must be cleared and savage nations must be civilized.

"When moral influence fails, force must take its place. Progress and civilization cannot stand forever waiting at the border line of Mexico, and waiting in vain.

"Murder in Mexico must cease; destruction and devastation must end. It is our duty and our destiny to end anarchy in Mexico and to dedicate and devote Mexican territory to the cause of enlightenment and civilization by making it a part of our own enlightened and civilized community.

"No narrow-minded individual can prevent the inevitable march of progress any more than a water-bug, skipping along against the course of the current, can retard the mighty flow of a great river.

"The great waters of American sentiment and obligation are rising and rolling toward the occupation of Mexico. They will not subside until their task is accomplished. They will not retreat until boundary lines have been eliminated, until Mexico is included within the borders of the United States, within the confines of civilization.

"WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST."

It is unfortunate that at this juncture the government at Washington should be in the hands of vain and opinionated men who have not allowed themselves to be moved by the spectacle of murder and outrage which Mexico daily presents to the civilized world.

In brief, they would make Huerta the sole grievance of the United States against Mexico, forgetting or condoning the murders of American men and the violation of American women.

This limitation of the reasons for American wrath and resentment against Mexico will not for a moment be tolerated by the American people. The war with Mexico, justifiable as a war against anarchy and mob rule, becomes petty and ridiculous as a war by Wilson upon Huerta.

Moreover, Carranza and Villa are equally guilty with Huerta of insults to the American flag and outrages upon and murder of American citizens. They are, in fact, the guiltier of the two factions, since the greater number of these outrages have occurred in their territory.

But the Wilson-Bryan plan of mediation seems to ignore the blood-guiltiness of these northern bandits altogether.

We cannot mediate, arbitrate, compromise or condone the murder of American citizens and the violation of American women. But those are the grievances for which the American people is springing to arms.

That is the fundamental folly of the mediation proposition. But more. How can we invite Huerta, whom we refuse to recognize, to send representatives before a board of mediation? How can Huerta be expected to appear by representatives in a court which is only to exist upon the explicit agreement that its verdict is to be "Huerta must go"?

The proposition is clearly preposterous. Presumably there was some purpose in its immediate acceptance by Bryan, and its eager personal proclamation by the administration's favored adviser, Andrew Carnegie. What, then, could be this reason?

What, except to halt active military measures for the invasion of Mexico and the march upon its capital city to allow further time for the degrading and disgraceful negotiations with Carranza and Villa.

What? Halt our troops at the gateway of Mexico, to still the bugles that throughout the land are ready to call the citizen soldiery into action for the redress of tortured humanity in Mexico, while the Secretary of State sends messages of amity and cajoling entreaties to the men more than all others responsible for outrages on American citizenship! Is that a policy which the nation can regard without shame?

The overthrow of Huerta is only part of the task. We must invade Mexico, reduce its lawless elements to submission, restore order and make it like the United States by making it part of the United States.

Not the United States and Mexico alone but the civilized countries of the world are vitally involved. The pique of an outgeneralled Secretary of State, the prejudice of a President, whose copy-book maxims are inadequate to meet the conditions confronting him, are too petty influences to control the situation longer. In this crisis the government at Washington should be guided by the great heart and the great mind, by the imagination, inspiration and devotion of the American people.

Are You Rigged for the Road?

By EDWIN MARKHAM

NOW that vacation time is nearing, study these hints from "The Efficient Age," another of Herbert Kaufman's brainy little books. This is what he says about getting rigged for the road:

"You can't keep up without 'upkeep.' You're a machine resentful if abuse and overuse.

"Your capacity in every direction is distinctly limited. You're designed for definite purposes, and you can't do more than you're built for.

"When you overspeed and overload, something must give way; and when you're overstrained, something must snap.

"You're strung with delicate wires, you move on exquisitely poised joints. If you're not constantly overhauled and carefully cleaned, if you're left exposed to the rust of neglect, your efficiency will decrease, your output will diminish, and you'll be thrown into society's waste-pile.

* * *

"Every human is both autocratic and automatic. He must manage himself and operate. In a large measure, on his own initiative. The responsibility of maintenance rests upon the individual.

"Providence has neither sufficient time nor patience to retinker men who don't care enough to care for themselves.

"Every time you think, every time you move, you destroy matter. When you tear down, you must rebuild; when you dispense, you must store in due ratio.

"Sleep is your repair shop. You'll stand on your feet only in proportion to the time you lie in your bed. You can't get the best of Nature; she demands respect for her laws.

* * *

"Take an inventory of your physical assets—you can't expect buyers to purchase dilapidated and obsolete service so long as greater speed and reliability are available.

"We judge your ability to manage for us by observing how you conduct your personal affairs.

"If you won't guard your own welfare it's safe to assume that you'll be even more negligent of our interests.

"Before you complain of the value we place upon you, consider what you last added improvements to your brain or your body.

"If you have exhausted your fund of knowledge, if your skill has died from a flame into an ash, if your strength has petered out, if enthusiasm has dried in your veins—you must expect rejection to follow inspection.

"Put in fresh batteries, lubricate, rub off the dust, polish and bring your equipment up-to-date."

Protecting the Birds—Boys Should Be Taught Not to Shoot Them

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

"DEAR FRIEND:

"Please permit us to call your attention to a great and serious evil now menacing our insect-eating birds. Millions of small birds in migration are destroyed yearly by the people of the Southern States and used as food. This destruction, now increasing, is having serious effect on the number of song birds in the North. Negroes are armed with guns, and many are proficient in other means of destruction. In the North, also, large numbers of foreign laborers coming from Europe kill small birds for food. It is only recently that little birds were sold in large quantities in New York City, and they are still sold by thousands in the South.

"The Audubon societies, which have already checked the killing of native birds for millinery purposes, now purpose to stop the slaughter of song birds for food in this country. This is a stupendous task. It must be done by educating the public through the schools, the press and the clergy, and by securing better laws and BETTER ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAWS now on the statute books. The scarcity of robins, bluebirds and bobolinks is becoming noticeable over wide areas. Will you not help us to the best of your ability to stop the slaughter which is now depleting our fields and woods of feathered songsters? A word of encouragement will be appreciated. Yours sincerely,

"T. GILBERT PEARSON,
"Secretary."

This letter ought to reach the heart and the brain of every man and woman of common sense and common sensibility in our land.

It ought to reach the hearts of mothers of young sons who have arrived at an age where they want to express their manly qualities by using a gun.

Air guns are only a degree less menacing in the hands of young lads than revolvers in the hands of gunmen.

Every year distressing accidents are reported in the daily press from the use of these "toys" by boys. Companions are blinded or crippled, and the precious lives of beautiful birds are sacrificed, while the killing instinct in growing children is cultivated and fostered.

All because women believe themselves to be "good mothers," and consider they are cultivating the manliness in their little boys by providing them with guns for amusement.

Meantime, if the mother began as soon as her little boy could talk, or understand, to awaken in his heart a love and sympathy for birds and beasts, and if she then stipulated that his gun practice should consist wholly in target shooting under proper guidance and instruction, her boy would grow up skilled as a good marksman and yet humane and kindly in his instincts.

Every man should know how to use a gun and revolver.

There are occasions when such knowledge is important.

But there is no part of a youth's education which needs a more careful and wise preparation, and guidance, than this.

Not one boy in a thousand receives this preparation and guidance.

The average boy teases for a gun, and receives it as a birthday or Christmas gift; and proceeds to use it after being told to "be careful" by the "loving parent," who goes away and leaves him to his amusement.

There is nothing our public schools need more than to include this education which the Audubon Society offers in the school courses. If you, dear madam, who peruses these lines, want to help make this beautiful world more beautiful and less sad, if you want to aid in forming higher ideals and kinder instincts in the rising generation, in ordering or trimming your hat try and use some common sense, and a little individual taste, and wear a hat which is becoming and beautiful and entirely devoid of any part of a dead bird. Plumes from the ostrich do not mean the destruction of that bird, for the ostrich is a robust fowl and the plumes grow while the ostrich exists, just as the goose grows new down each year. But besides plumes, there are exquisite aigrettes and flowers, and laces and jets, and velvets and ribbons and other trimmings which can make headgear attractive.

Use your good taste and ask your milliner to show some original ideas in building you a hat.

Remember the osprey and aigrette mean the death and torture of the mother birds, and the slow starvation of their young as a rule.

Any refined woman should be ashamed to be seen wearing an aigrette. Spun glass and preserved grasses and ferns produce quite as artistic effects.

Help the Audubon Society save birds.
